~ Family Owned & Operated Since 1985 ~

Our Legacy of Quality and Service

Back in the 19th century, when scores of Germans and Czechs immigrated to Central Texas, they brought with them traditional foods and techniques for processing cattle, wild game and much more. Above all else, they brought a work ethic that never quit.

They used time-honored techniques, chose the right meat for freshness, and crafted custom cuts and sausages that were served up at family tables throughout the region.

With so many national chain markets popping up with mass-produced products today, it sometimes seems like time-honored traditions are disappearing from America. Not at Miiller's.

That's because when you grow up in Llano, Texas watching your father make sausage by hand and sharing that freshness and quality with neighbors, you learn a thing or two about doing things the right way, the time-honored way. You use only the freshest meats, the choicest cuts and take the time to ensure what you offer is the best quality.

That means doing right for our customers. When people walk into Miiller's, they're assured that the quality of our meat, the caliber of our service, and the craftsmanship of our butchers are held to the highest standards of quality and freshness.

Why do we do it the way we do? Simple. It's all about family. Our family and your family.

We only offer the freshest meats and make our sausage using our family recipes that have brought smiles to the faces of families across Texas and beyond.

(L) David Allen, of David's Creations, has been Bryan's right-hand man for over 20 years-Circa 2003. (C) The original Miiller's Meats-Circa 1985. (R) Miillers family making sausage on the family farm-Circa 1980.
