An Ancestral French Treasure

Bourg-Joly Malicorne, faïencerie d'art du Bourg-Joly, was founded in 1747, in the heart of the Sarthe River valley by Jean Loiseau. It is the oldest earthenware company still in operation in Malicorne-sur-Sarthe.

Faïence, or tin-glazed and enamelled earthenware, first emerged in France during the 16th Century. Originally replicating designs that had traditionally been produced in wood or metal for everyday use, over the next two centuries, the styles and designs evolved towards finely crafted forms, elegant proportions and artistic hand painted patterns.

White clay was used to produce the finest results for the most sought-after pieces. Elaborate masterpieces and exceptional hand carving techniques helped to build the Bourg-Joly Malicorne name and make the products renowned throughout France.

Over the course of our 250-year history, these skills and know-how have been transmitted from generation to generation. Since April 2009, a new generation of enthusiasts is carrying forward the tradition, our history and designs into the 21st century.

Today our craftsmen continue to hand craft and hand paint our products in much the same way as it has been done for over 250 years. In preserving French heritage, our historical traditions and ancestral techniques, we create heirloom pieces both classic and contemporary, that will be enjoyed by generations to come.

Recognition for our ancestral Savoir Faire & Industrial Know-How

In September 2010, Bourg-Joly Malicorne, Faïencerie d'art, was awarded the EPV label (Entreprise du Patrimoine Vivant) by the French Industry Ministry. The label is a mark of recognition by the French State, put in place to reward French firms for the excellence of their traditional and industrial know-how.

Bourg-Joly Malicorne received the Atelier d'Art de France label in July 2011 in recognition of its ancestral and unique skills and savoir-faire.

SCULPTED PIECES

For many of our pieces including vases, saints, animals, fish, birds, fruit and fruit sculptures, the clay is rolled flat, then carefully pressed by hand into a series of moulds to create the various three-dimensional shapes needed.

The clay is left to dry slightly, then carefully lifted from the moulds, before the edges are trimmed by hand. Using slurry (a mixture of clay and water) as a form of glue, the edges of the various forms are then joined together. Once the final three-dimensional piece has come together, it is left once again to dry slightly, before any seams are meticulously smoothed away.

The Making Process : Step by Step

CALIBRATION

Aside from our potter's wheel, calibration also known as jiggering, is one of the very few mechanised processes that we use. The prepared clay is weighed and cut to size, then placed in a plaster mould, which itself is held in a mechanical socket that turns.

A large clap arm is lowered on to the mould and with the help of a specially shaped tool, the clay is carefully pressed into the contours of the mould. Once finished, this first basic shape is trimmed and further refined by hand by our master craftsmen.

AJOURAGE or OPEN WORK

The style for which Bourg-Joly Malicorne is synonymous is our famous openwork. Using a scalpel and a steady hand, our craftsmen cut away areas of the clay to reveal beautiful lace-like patterns. Every opening is cut and beveled several times to create perfect symmetry and elegance.

This highly skilled technique requires rigor, patience and attention to detail, with every plate taking no less than two hours to complete the openwork. Much copied in style, our work retains its distinctive identity, each piece a testament to the skills of our craftsmen.

FIRING

Once the making process is complete, each piece needs to thoroughly air dry, a process that can take from a few days to several months depending on the size of the piece and the weather.

Each piece is then fired in the kiln at a temperature of 1000°c to transform it into a 'biscuit' or unglazed piece. After firing, it can take several days for the kiln to cool down enough for it to be opened. Each piece is carefully inspected, sanded by hand to remove any imperfections, then dusted, ready to be hand glazed.

GLAZING

Hand glazing is an ancestral technique no longer used in most industrial manufacturing. Using an elegant gesture, the biscuit is completely submerged either by hand or with the use of a pair of tongs into a vat containing the glaze. The biscuit must stay submerged just long enough for every part of the surface to be evenly coated with the glaze. The skill of the craftsman is in knowing how to submerged the biscuit to obtain an even coating.

The biscuit acts like a sponge, absorbing the water from the glaze, leaving only the powdered glaze as a coating on the surface. Finally, the piece is cleaned to remove any excess glaze and touch up any spots of missing glaze with a paint brush.

HAND PAINTING

Once the piece has thoroughly dried after glazing, it is ready to be hand painted. The motif is transferred using a poncif (a stencil covered with tiny pin-sized holes). The poncif is dusted with powdered charcoal leaving delicate trace lines to direct the painter. Using traditional pigments, the painter recreates with motif, building up the colour, layer by layer, a technique not dissimilar to water colour painting.

Complicated motifs can take several hours to complete. During firing in the kiln, the pigments will fuse completely with the glaze, giving it an impeccable and durable finish.

MATERIALS:

All our pieces are entirely handmade, hand glazed and hand painted from earthenware clay in our atelier in Malicorne-sur-Sarthe, France. The whiteness of our clay and the traditional hand glazing techniques we use give our pieces their unique quality.

All of the glazes used on our dinnerware are certified as food safe. Our technique of hand painting on the raw glaze means that once fired, the hand painted motif fuses entirely with the glaze creating a very resilient surface. The motif will not fade or rub away with use.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CARE:

Plates and bowls : Dishwasher on a delicate program only but stack each piece with care to avoid the plates touching. Hand washing recommended. Not microwave safe.

Baskets & decorative items : Careful hand washing recommended. Not microwave safe.

This glaze is for decorative pieces only. Not food safe.
