GENERAL SURGICAL EXPERIENCE

I trained in General Surgery, Orthopaedic Surgery, Neurosurgery and Urology over a period of almost four years, during which I kept a record of the procedures performed without supervision. It includes 15 amputations, 50 appendectomies, 13 bowel resections, 95 inguinal hernia repairs, 42 circumcisions, 70 procedures for varicose veins, 98 cystoscopies and resections of bladder tumour, 11 open fracture reductions and 27 orchidopexy and orchidectomy procedures. I supervised fracture clinics, and looked after patients in Intensive Care.

PLASTIC SURGERY EXPERIENCE

As a Trainee

After training in General Surgery, I trained in Plastic Surgery over a period of eight years, working at five different units in the United Kingdom. I also spent six months working at the Hospital for Sick Children in Paris. During this time I assisted at a wide variety of procedures including craniofacial surgery, cleft lip and palate surgery and free tissue transfer. Before becoming a consultant, I personally performed 2636 procedures. This includes 1515 procedures in General Plastic Surgery and Burns, 667 Hand Surgery cases, 321 Head and Neck cases (including cleft lip and palate), and 133 Cosmetic Surgery procedures.

At St. Thomas's Hospital and the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street I worked with Epidermolysis Bullosa patients on whom I performed procedures to release finger contractures and syndactyly. St. Thomas's Hospital had an Argon laser which I used to treat patients with port wine stains with good results.

During my six months working in the Head and Neck Unit at the Royal Marsden Hospital, I worked with the reconstructive team to resect intraoral and facial tumours and to reconstruct the defects with cutaneous, myocutaneous and free flaps.

I have a special interest in the correction of ear deformities, and set up the first units for ear reconstruction in the UK, at Great Ormond Street Hospital, London, and at Mount Vernon Hospital, Northwood.

As a Consultant

I have maintained my interest in ear reconstruction, and have to date reconstructed almost 800 ears with a carved costal cartilage framework. Many of these cases come from abroad. I also provide bone anchored prosthetic ears for patients who prefer this technique. Between December 1992 and October 2006, I ran Laser Services at Mount Vernon Hospital, treating a variety of vascular lesions, pigmented lesions and tattoos. In conjunction with the Department of Medical Optoelectronics at the Swansea Institute, I developed a laser for depilation in use worldwide today and still undertake hair removal and skin laser clinics.

TEACHING

As a trainee I regularly lectured to student nurses and medical undergraduates. As a consultant I now teach on a variety of courses from Minor Surgical Techniques for General Practitioners to ear reconstruction and laser treatment for specialist plastic surgeons.

RESEARCH

Prompted by cases of chemotherapy extravasation referred with extensive tissue loss and scarring around nerves and tendons, I studied children who suffered soft tissue loss after drug extravasation injuries. In some instances, despite extensive reconstruction, hand function remained severely compromised. Early removal of noxious materials (Calcium, Potassium, Adriamycin and Daunorubicin) from the subcutaneous perivenous space by liposuction or saline flushout techniques has proved most rewarding. One hundred and ten such patients have been studied, and the results of this technique are quite striking.

During my French Exchange Fellowship I developed a method of calculating intracranial volume from CT scans, which was then used to study 100 children with craniosynostosis. Contrary to traditional teaching, it was found that the majority have a normal intracranial volume.

Neonates with misshapen ears can have the deformity corrected with a simple splint if this is applied at birth. The floppy cartilage moulds readily and gives good long term results. In most cases this avoids the need for surgical correction later. This work was presented to the British Association of Plastic Surgeons and received widespread media coverage in December 1994. As a result, I developed the Ear Buddy, a device now available worldwide for the treatment of new-born infants with ear deformities.

A review of the psychological benefits of microtia reconstruction has been undertaken. As a refinement to the surgical technique, those patients undergoing autogenous tissue reconstruction of ears now have the ribcage reconstructed with unwanted fragments of carved chest cartilage and the vestigial ear remnant. This development appears to reduce pain in the short term and may reduce the risk of chest wall deformity in the long term.

At the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, I undertook a joint microtia clinic with the Ear, Nose and Throat Department and the Department of Medical Genetics, and began several projects to examine the possible causes of significant congenital ear anomalies.

In a combined project with the Swansea Institute a laser to remove hair was developed. The technology is now in use world-wide. It has a variety of clinical applications and clinical trials have shown it to be successful in removing hair for long periods of time. Further research to improve results is underway.

As a result of collaboration with Gyrus Medical and Rhytec, a nitrogen-driven plasma kinetic device for skin resurfacing was developed. This passed into commercial use in the US in 2006 and was introduced into the UK in 2007.
