Lived Experience from the Inside Out
Social and Political Philosophy in Edith Stein

Antonio Calcagno

Focusing on significant texts from Stein’s early philosophical work, Calcagno explicates rich sources of social and political insight, with Stein’s particular focus on individual consciousness as the entry point: how we understand and live, always from our own interiorities, the phenomenal experiences of self, others, the masses, society, community, and the state.

Ontology after Ontotheology
Plurality, Event, and Contingency in Contemporary Philosophy

Gert-Jan van der Heiden

“In seven chapters within two sections, the author takes readers on a tour of contemporary ontological theories in their relationship to the historically prior movements of hermeneutics, deconstruction, and phenomenology. . . . The argument is tightly focused. . . . Recommended.” —Choice

Rhetoric and the Gift
Ancient Rhetorical Theory and Contemporary Communication

Mari Lee Mifsud

A historian of ancient Greek rhetorical theory, Mari Lee Mifsud examines questions of significance of rhetoric in contemporary communication by turning first to Aristotle’s rhetorical theory and his use of Homer’s idea of exchange, or gift-giving. The resulting study provides fresh ways of thinking through our conceptions of relational ethics in communication, including the ways in which these play out in politics, law, and culture.

Levinas Studies
An Annual Review, Volume 9
Edited by Jeffrey Bloechl
Volume 9 includes essays that probe the inner contours of Levinas’s thinking, as well as others that explore the pertinence of that thinking for important contemporary issues. Extended attention is paid to his conceptions of infinity, Woman, eros, fecundity, and temporality. The ethics of radical responsibility is developed as a resource for understanding human dignity and care for the environment, and prompts a fresh look at the possibility of a protennode- dimensional framework of fundamental ontology.

Levinas and Asian Thought
Edited by Leah Kalmanson, Frank Garrett & Sarah Mattice
While influential works have been devoted to comparative studies of various Asian philosophies and continental philosophers such as Nietzsche, Heidegger, Merleau-Ponty, and Derrida, this collection of 13 essays is the first to fully treat the increased interest in intercultural and interdisciplinary studies related to the work of Emmanuel Levinas in such a context. Levinas and Asian Thought seeks to discover common ground between Levinas’s ethical project and various religious and philosophical traditions of Asia such as Mahayana Bud- dhism, Theravādic Buddhism, Vedism, Confucianism, Daoism, and Islam.

Reexamining Deconstruction and Determine Religio
Toward a Religion with Religion
Edited by J. Aaron Simmons and Stephen Minister
“Simmons and Minister gather some exciting young voices in Continental phil- osophy of religion to discuss the claim that postmodernism, and specifically de- construction, pushes us to a renewed commitment to our own particular religious communities. They purposefully stage the book as a discussion. . . . Ulti- mately, this structure helps support the book’s thesis that inhabiting a specific religious tradition does not prevent someone from engaging in actual, serious dialogue with other people.” —Notre Dame Philosophical Reviews

A History of Political Ideas from Antiquity to the Middle Ages
Philippe Nemo
Translated by Kenneth Casler
“Appealing to readers with ‘little prior knowledge’ of political thought, [Nemo] provides a lucid, engaging introductory volume that will enlighten both novices and specialists. The use of ‘historical context’ combined with exceedingly accu- rate interpretations of primary texts and the absence of ideological frameworks contributes to the high overall quality of the book. This valuable and readable book deserves a wide readership. Highly recommended. All readership levels.” —Choice

The Truth (and Untruth) of Language
Heidegger, Ricœur, and Derrida on Discourse and Displacement
Gert-Jan van der Heiden
“Van der Heiden’s book offers a way of seeing the relationship of both Ricœur and Derrida to Heidegger, and hence the relationship between Ricœur and Der- rida, in terms of a conception of truth as disclosure and displacement. [It] arrives at a new and productive understanding of Ricœur’s and Derrida’s indebtedness to Heidegger.” —Notre Dame Philosophical Reviews

Levinas's Philosophy of Time
Gift, Responsibility, Diacony, Hope
Eric Severson
“While focused on an explication of Levinas’s complex and shifting idea of time, Severson’s rich discussion connects the thematic of time to many other notions of Levinas’s, including escape, hypostasis, presence, dwelling, transcendence, proximity, and infinity. . . . An original contribution to both Levinas studies and to understanding the idea of time in the continental tradition. While any serious Levinas scholar will want to read this book, continental philosophers with an interest in time will wish to engage it as well.” —Canadian Society for Continental Philosophy

The Intersubjectivity of Time
Levinas and Infinite Responsibility
Yael Lin
“In an exhaustive look at Emmanuel Levinas’s primary texts, both his philosophical writings and his writings on Judaism, Yael Lin brings together Levinas’s various perspectives on time. Her study concludes that we can, indeed, extract a coherent and consistent conception of time from Levinas’s thought, one that is distinctly political. Thus, this study elucidates Levinas’s original claim that time is actually constituted via social relationships.”

Levinas and Human Rights
Samuel Resnik
“Levinas and Human Rights is a signal contribution to the study of Levinas’s talmudic writings and his philosophical work. By engaging Levinas on such questions concerning Judaism and philosophy, and the relationship between text and inspiration, these eight essays take these issues considerably further into the field. Specifically, the authors treat Levinas and his contemporary thinkers Jacques Lacan and Vladimir Jankélévitch, his interest in the writing of Shakespeare and Linn Bley, his philosophy of language and enigma, and, finally, Levinasian meditations on Hebrew texts of Scripture.”

Facing Nature
Levinas and Environmental Thought
Edited by William Edgell, James Hatley & Christian Dietm
“Emmanuel Levinas’s Totality and Infinity . . . is arguably one of the most im- portant and influential books in twentieth century continental philosophy. Davidson and Perpich have edited a book that both considers the legacy of this text and sketches its possible futures in light of contemporary philosophical debates. . . . Covering topics from applied ethics to legal theory and from ped- agogy to human rights, this book is a significant contribution to contemporary Levinas scholarship. Recommended.” —Choice

Levinas Studies
Edited by Jeffrey Bloechl
Volume 8 specifically addresses the current debate among scholars regarding the relation between Levinas’s talmudic writings and his philosophical work. By engaging Levinas on such questions concerning Judaism and philosophy, and the relationship between text and inspiration, these eight essays take these issues considerably further into the field. Specifically, the authors treat Levinas and his contemporary thinkers Jacques Lacan and Vladimir Jankélévitch, his interest in the writing of Shakespeare and Linn Bley, his philosophy of language and enigma, and, finally, Levinasian meditations on Hebrew texts of Scripture.

Heidegger’s Philosophy of Religion
From God to the Gods
Ben Vedder
“Vedder’s account is highly informed, nuanced, and displays an impressive grasp of both Heidegger’s early and late thought. . . . No doubt, Heidegger’s Philosophy of Religion is a signal contribution to the study of Heidegger’s re- lation to religion.” —Research in Phenomenology
