

DUJOUR

DUJOUR.COM

SEVEN DOLLARS
FALL 2015

BERMUDA
BOUND PREPPING FOR THE AMERICA'S CUP WITH TEAM ORACLE

PRIM AND PROPER 2.0
REVAMPING
LADYLIKE
ACCESSORIES

MALE
BONDING

DANIEL CRAIG

with David Bailey and
Martin McDonagh

Life after
Dr. Brandt:
In search of the social set's
next face guru

+ Instagram's richest kids and fall's textured fashion

HOUSTON

SKIN GODDESSES

In a quest to calm their own complexions, two Houston beauty whizzes are taking the sting out of skin care

PARRY BOTANICALS

Elizabeth Koval Parry is known for her thriving interior-design business, but she recently expanded with the launch of natural beauty line Parry Botanicals. The creator decided to develop products for sensitive skin when her own allergies flared and she found relief in homemade products. "My two professions are similar in that they deal with aesthetics, but different in that my product line offers instant gratification," she says.

DRUNK ELEPHANT

After years of trying different products to treat problems from rosacea to oiliness, Houston native Tiffany Masterson started studying the ingredients. "I finally figured out that my skin had a reaction to essential oils and fragrance," she says. The discovery inspired her non-toxic line, Drunk Elephant. "We isolate the ingredients and weed out the toxic ones, leaving only what's safe and non-irritating," Masterson says.

THE BACKGROUND

"After dealing with significant allergies, I wanted to use the highest quality pure ingredients," says Parry. "I worked with chemists to develop 100 percent natural moisturizers that are made without parabens, dyes or fragrances and are gentle enough for sensitive skin."

PHILOSOPHY

"It's all about simplicity and hydration. The products are for everyone (men, women, kids), and they are safe to use anywhere on your body—even under your eyes."

KEY INGREDIENTS

Vitamin E, aloe, natural seed oils, butters and extracts (sunflower, shea, coconut, chamomile).

"I wanted something that didn't exist," says Masterson. "So I made non-toxic [a new category with safe ingredients that won't cause irritation or inflammation], clinically effective pH-friendly cleansing bars, facial oil, serums and sunscreen."

"Listen to your skin—not me—to give it whatever it requires. We pack the products with everything you need and nothing you don't for healthy skin that glows."

Virgin Marula oil (with omegas 6 and 9), vitamin C, thermal mud bamboo powder, raspberry seed oil.

THE DETAILS

$18-$26; parrybotanicals.com

$32-$90; drunkelephant.com

TO THE POINT

Kate Hersch has always loved handwork on textiles. That's what led the Austinite and mother of two to launch August Morgan, her whimsical line of linens, glassware and trays that feature hand-stitching and clever phrasing—like her cocktail napkins ($34 for a set of four) embroidered with a pair of bees and the word buzzed.

"I started collecting and repurposing vintage needlepoint to make pillows, then Barney's picked them up," she says. But when it became difficult to source new needlework, Hersch shifted gears into gift-ready barware. "It's been such a treat," she says of dreaming up original designs. augustmorgan.com

Whisked Away

Whiskey is working for married couple Nick and Amanda Swift of Swift Distillery, in Dripping Springs. The burgeoning booze barons just released the second bottling of their made-in-Texas Swift Single Malt. "With only three ingredients—water, yeast and barley—you cannot hide anything," Amanda says. "The mastering of technique is what makes single malt so exceptional." swiftdistillery.com

—FOR MORE ON HOUSTON, VISIT DUJOUR.COM/CITIES