Tiny dorm rooms and shared hall bathrooms are among the least glamorous aspects of college life, and there is no denying that cramped quarters demand a pared-down routine. For starters, IGG's 1995 is like the futuristic little sister of Pert Plus: Instead of combining shampoo and conditioner, it cleans hair while also texturizing it, depositing a fine mist of clay that gives you second-day hair straight out of the shower. Skincare is just as simple. Begin with French pharmacy favorite Collosol, a rinse-free cleansing milk new to the States; then add a dewy hit of moisture from Pixi by Petra or Shiseido's new WASO collection.

Day-to-day, Lancôme's eye-opening mascara and Clarins lip oil offset the effects of all-nighters, and chic, discreet envelopes of soap sheets from L'Officine Universelle Buly are a bookbag must for handwashing emergencies. Aesop's new room sprays, meanwhile, keep living spaces smelling fresh—without setting off the fire alarm. FOR DETAILS SEE PAGE 115.
