

THE TCO

The nation’s largest electrical distributors are navigating through the economic storm touched off by the COVID-19 coronavirus.

Accounting for an estimated $81.4 billion in sales — 69% of Electrical Wholesaling’s $117.5 billion in estimated 2019 total sales through distributors of electrical supplies — the 2020 Top 200 electrical distributors possess an enormous amount of clout.

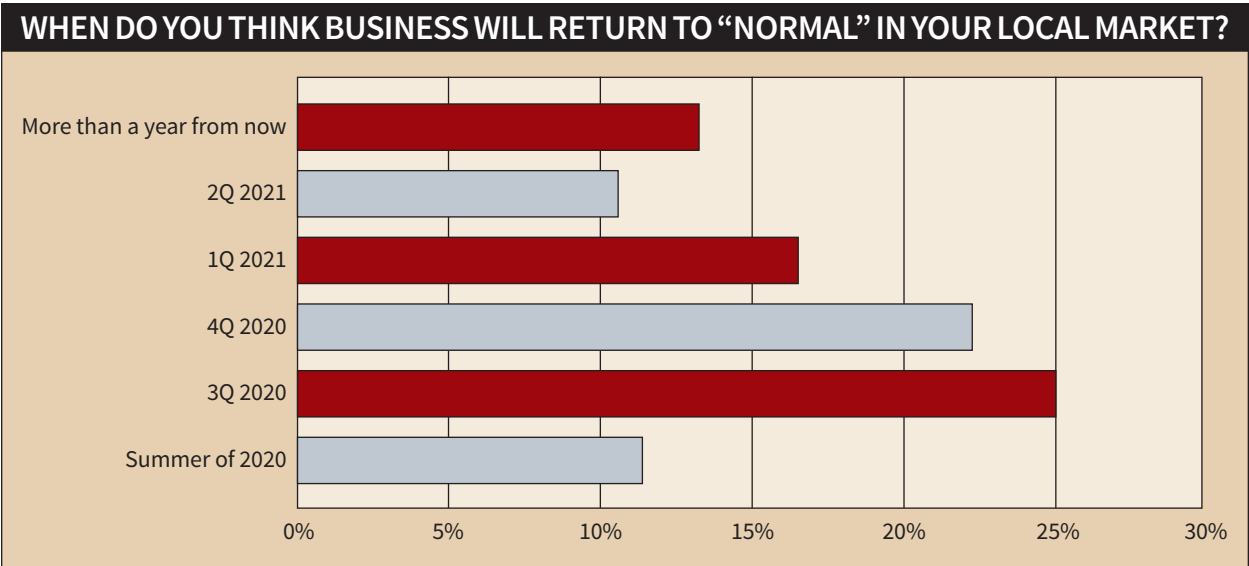

As both full-line and specialty distributors, and national, regional and smaller independent companies, these companies represent a broad range of operational strategies. Responses to our 2020 Top 200 survey showed that despite the differences in size, location, product mix or operational strategy, executives from many of these companies sense some dramatic shifts in how business will be done in the future because of the COVID-19 crisis.

The electrical wholesaling industry sailed into 2020 with a fair amount of momentum. The nonresidential construction market was expected to slow down some this year, but distributors’ contractor customers had enough projects in backlog and underway, while national data showed they were hiring at a record rate — employing more than 900,000 employees. The overall industrial market was a bit sluggish, but there was business to be had in the retrofit of lighting equipment in commercial and industrial facilities with the latest in LED lighting and the installation of new industrial control systems.

Add in the surge in the construction of data centers and massive distribution centers by Amazon and other online and brick-and-mortar merchants; a surprising amount of activity in the auto industry in both car factories and feeder businesses; a solid flow of mixed-use projects; and some decent residential construction activity, and you had a 2020 electrical market that could easily grow at a modest but healthy rate.

After the COVID-19 coronavirus virtually shut down the national economy in mid-March, the electrical world was in many ways changed forever. Five major trends became quickly apparent as we analyzed the responses:

1. A move toward digital sales and marketing strategies because customers won't allow in-person sales calls from distributors' salespeople.

2. The use of Zoom, Microsoft Teams and other videoconference strategies for intracompany meetings and virtual sales calls to customers and other buying influences.

3. A broad acceptance of remote or home offices now that companies have seen these officing strategies can be quite efficient for some types of jobs or workers.

4. Dramatic cutbacks in overnight travel to conferences, and real questions about which industry conferences can most easily be converted to virtual formats.

5. The importance of having a disaster recovery or emergency preparedness plan in place.

MORE DIGITAL SALES & MARKETING

The move toward online sales calls, distance learning and other virtual marketing initiatives will transform the industry forever, according to executives from several of the nation's largest distributors.

"Digital solutions will continue to differentiate distributors and influence how we serve our customers," said Brian Begg, VP of investor relations and treasurer, WESCO Distribution, Pittsburgh.

Wes Smith, Mayer Electric Supply, Birmingham, AL, believes some business fundamentals have been forever changed. "We will never go back

"I believe all of us have learned to efficiently work remotely, our customers included," he said. "I believe more business will be conducted electronically versus face-to-face."

GET USED TO ZOOM MEETINGS

Videoconferencing has quickly become a way of life in the electrical to 'normal,'" he said in his response. "Digital will accelerate, counters will look different, education will be distance. Work from home will become a way of life."

Chris Scarbrough, CEO, Springfield Electric Supply Co., Springfield, IL, said, "The future of selling in the electrical market will be digital sales development."

Phil DeLoache, president, First SOURCE Electrical, Houston, has already seen plenty of major changes in how his company and others are working to provide a safe and healthy workplace and how they have used e-commerce and other electronic tools to connect employees and customers. He believes the work-at-home trend is here to stay.

industry because of the COVID-19 crisis. Many Top 200 executives said it has already cut down on business travel and helped their companies communicate quickly and efficiently with customers.

Because of their popularity with his company's customers, Devin Ezop, president and CEO, Metro Wire & Cable Corp., Sterling Heights, MI, said Zoom meetings might be the "new norm for the foreseeable future."

Several distributors said it became quickly apparent that the various videoconferencing technologies can help them operate efficiently with so many employees working from remote locations. Said Ben Granley, president, Werner Electric – Minnesota, Cottage Grove, MN, “We will use Zoom for many more meetings that we did in the past. We have learned we can be effective while remote.”

“Employees are far more comfortable with video/Skype/Zoom meetings, and these will see more of an acceptance,” added Elaine Gerrie, co-president and CEO, Gerrie Electric Wholesale Ltd., Burlington, ON.

For other distributors, Zoom and other videoconferencing technologies will help them eliminate some unnecessary business trips. “We will still travel but may consider Zoom meetings where possible to reduce the personal contact,” said Donald Maloney, president, Coburn Supply Co., Beaumont, TX. Along the same lines, Joseph Borkey, president, PEPCO, Eastlake Village, OH, said, “We will be much more inclined to execute Zoom meetings and travel only when necessary.”

HOME OFFICE ARE HERE TO STAY

Many respondents were surprised at how quickly employees and customers adapted to working remotely and how effective it can be. Many of the respondents said after the COVID-19 crisis passes they will continue to have some of their employees working remotely.

Martin Stovall, VP, Advance Electrical & Industrial Supply, Norcross, GA, said he learned two big lessons

THE 25 DISTRIBUTORS WITH THE HIGHEST SALES-PER-EMPLOYEE

As in the past, specialty distributors, which tend to have fewer customers and employees than full-line electrical distributors, dominate the list of distributors as ranked by sales per employee. The companies here were among the 132 respondents that provided both a 2019 sales number and an employee count for publication in this year's listing. They had an average sales-per-employee of $817,088. Several other distributors (both full-line and specialists) would have been in this Top 25 listing but asked their sales data be used confidentially. The average sales per employee for the 104 respondents that identified themselves as full-line electrical distributors was approximately $702,144, up from last year's figure for full-line distributors of $693,580.

In addition, Graybar and its employees donated more than $1.64 million to worthy causes, exceeding the original goal of $1.5 million.

In other news, the company expanded service centers in Fresno, CA, Charlotte, NC, and Minneapolis, and opened a new service center in Cranbury, NJ, in early 2020.

Gross Electric, Toledo, OH, is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

Jo-Kell Inc., Chesapeake, VA, benefitted from the U.S. Navy’s decision to construct two carriers at the same time that had an immediate positive impact on revenue. Power and control sales to the shipbuilding market were up significantly, said John Kelly, the company’s executive VP, Sales & Process.

At K/E Electric Supply Corp., Mount Clemens, MI, four employees with 25 years or more of service and two other staffers more than 10 years of service retired in the last six months. With those personnel changes, the company spent a good portion of 2019 adapting to a modified management structure, according to Rock Kuchenmeister, president/CEO.

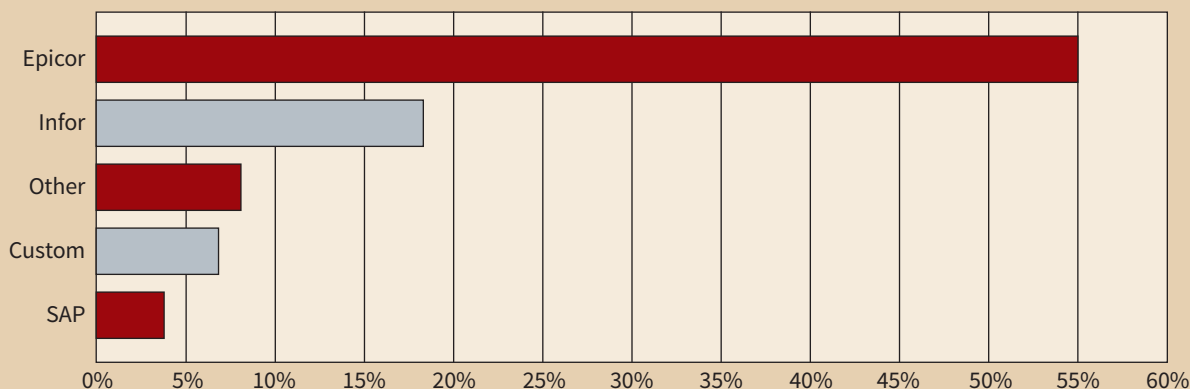

PEPCO, Eastlake Village, OH, continued to penetrate the utility space and hired approximately 20 people from the former Leff Electric/AMP, Cleveland, to help drive potential growth for 2020-2021. Leff Electric suspended regular business operations on April 10, according to an announcement on its website.

At Shingle & Gibb Automation, Moorestown, NJ, Rick Slaugh, president, said the biggest news this year was “seeing our disaster plan work almost flawlessly, helping us get a jump on helping our customers with no delay. The biggest thing we missed was not having webcams and microphones for office computers... We had done network, phone and software upgrades for two years as part of disaster planning and it all worked mostly seamlessly when we dispersed our team.”

For Summit Electric Supply, Albuquerque, NM, Sheila Hernandez, VP, said naming of Patrick Davis as CEO/president and Vic Jury Jr. moving to executive chair was very significant for Summit and its future.

Opening its fifth branch in Pittsburgh last year was big for YESCO Electrical Supply, Columbiana, OH, said James DeRosa, general manager. “It was the first metro area for us. We also have adopted a few new workflows and are consulting with some groups for EDI automation on the customer side. We are also going after a GSA contract.”

Thirty-eight percent of all respondents are on Eclipse ERP systems. Other software includes Acclaim, DDI, Reflection, Harvest, ECI Spruce, Accuterm, Microsoft Dynamics, JDE Oracle, Rubicon, Sage100, Salesforce/Financial Force, Savant Enterprise, SHIMS and VAI.

THE WORLD'S TWO LARGEST ELECTRICAL DISTRIBUTORS

Company Name:	Town/City:	2019 Revenues ($ billions)	Employees	Locations
Sonepar SA	Paris, France	26.93	46,000	3,000
Rexel SA	Paris, France	15.42	26,000	1,900

In 2019, the two largest electrical distributors in the world had more than 72,000 employees working in 4,900 branches and who did an estimated $42.35 billion in sales in 74 countries (Rexel -26 countries; Sonepar - 48 countries). (EW sales estimated converted to U.S. dollars from Euros using the 12/31/19 exchange rate).

THE FIVE LARGEST FULL-LINE ELECTRICAL DISTRIBUTORS IN NORTH AMERICA

Company Name:	Town/City:	2019 Revenues	Employees	Branches
Sonepar North America	Paris, France	11,409,880,000	48,000*	987
WESCO International Inc.	Pittsburgh, PA	8,358,917,000	9,500	500
Graybar	St. Louis, MO	7,525,000,000	9,030	289
Consolidated Electrical Distributors Inc. (CED)	Irving, TX	NA	NA	700
Rexel Holdings USA (Rexel SA)	Dallas, TX	5,854,531,560	8,500	550

In 2019, the five largest full-line distributors in North America had an estimated $39.1 billion in combined revenue and operated an estimated 3,026 branches in North America. According to Electrical Wholesaling's sales data, these five companies account for no less 33% of an estimated $117.5 billion-plus in 2018 electrical sales in the United States and Canada. (Footnotes: All data reported for North America unless otherwise noted. *Worldwide) during the COVID-19 crisis — that things can change in an instant, and that working remote is not as difficult as some believed. Other distributors said remote officing produced better results than they expected. “We can employ mass numbers of employees effectively who work remotely. While we prefer in-house, on-site staff, we are pleasantly surprised at our success to work remotely,” said Rock Kuchenmeister, president & CEO, K/E Electric Supply Corp., Mount Clemens, MI.

LESS BUSINESS TRAVEL

As has been mentioned earlier, distributors’ field salespeople won’t be hitting the road as often because of the restrictions that customers have placed on visits by outside salespeople. Respondents are also planning to cut their travel to industry conferences, until next year at the earliest. Some said their business travel will be restricted until a vaccine is widely available.

John Eggleton, the president and COO for Kirby Risk Electrical Supply, Lafayette, IN, was one of several respondents who said their company’s business travel will be basically eliminated in 2020 and could be reduced significantly throughout 2021.

Phil DeLoache, First SOURCE Electrical, said his company won't be seeing as many manufacturers' regional sales reps. "Business travel is permanently affected, and we'll see less of it," he said. "No one is going to want to meet with 'the regional guy' you don't know from out of town who travels weekly and is therefore exposed to lots of people and risks."

One marketing executive with a Top 50 electrical distributor said the industry's large conferences face some real challenges in the future. "The industry (and most industries) will be forced to rethink the conferences and meetings," she said. "The large-scale events will not translate well to online, and I'm not sure they are coming back to what they were before.

"This makes it so much easier to break the tradition of customer entertainment that we were already working on. Never waste a good crisis."

BE PREPARED

Some Top 200 executives were proud of how their management teams used disaster recovery or emergency preparedness plans to guide employees through the crisis. Said John Kelly, executive VP, Sales & Process, Jo-Kell

TOP 200 DISTRIBUTORS MAKE THEIR PICKS ON SOME NEW PRODUCTS THAT STOOD OUT

Each year, we ask the top executives at North America's largest distributors about the new products that caught their eye over the past few months. With all the R&D going on these days in the electrical market, we are always surprised to not hear back from more distributors about interesting new products. That was certainly the case in this year's survey, as only 20 of the more than 150-plus distributor executives who provided revenue and company data for the Top 200 ranking made mention of any new products.

It's hard for EW's editors to know if the reason for the lack of response on this question is that the senior executives who typically answer our survey delegate stocking decisions for new products to others on their management and sales teams, or if they just weren't impressed with the new products that came out over the past year. A lack of information may be a factor, too. We have found that manufacturers often center their promotional efforts for new products on electrical contractors and other end users and sometimes don't put as much marketing muscle in the form of advertising and other messaging into the keeping distributors posted on rollouts.

There were a few new products that caught the attention of Top 200 distributors. LED lighting in general and antibacterial lighting in particular was mentioned by several survey respondents, including Kevin Schulte, CFO for E. Sam Jones Distributor, Atlanta. Schulte also likes what he is seeing in flat-panel LEDs. Steve Byrne, COO-Lighting for Facility Solutions Group, Austin, TX, said, "COVID-19 has caused an increased interest in Germicidal and UV lighting products."

Brittany Davis, a compliance associate with Border States Electric, Fargo, ND, said Hubbell Lighting's launch in this area was a winner. "The launch of Hubbell's Spectra Clean was put together well with good marketing material including educational pieces for both our internal sales team as well as end users, white papers and standard sales brochures," she said. "Hubbell's training efforts included multiple virtual trainings, Youtube videos and joint sales calls. They were ahead of the competition launching this product in mid- to late-2019 before any of the COVID-19 scare hit."

Schneider Electric is also helping customers with a lot of programs geared towards helping customers through COVID-19, said Jason Edwards, VP of sales and marketing, B&K Power to Serve, City of Industry, CA.

In the C&I market, Power Assemblies' portable automatic transfer switches impressed Greg Knowles, president & CEO, ATI Electrical, Bend, OR. He said they have been a "revenue boost for his company's temporary power markets." "They can be used with generators to automatically transfer power in temporary power applications," said Knowles. "They are a great product for the mobile hospital market."

David Gardner, president, Mission Controls & Automation, San Antonio, said Siemens has come out with some new customer-friendly motors and drives. "Their 3RW5 series soft start and their 6SL VFD are great new features that offer customer flexibility with process control applications," he said.

Stephen Kleynhans, president, O'Neil Electric Supply, Woodbridge, ON, likes what he is seeing from Milwaukee Tool in their product launches. "Their planning, consultation with distributor, collaborative marketing and launch plans and the quality of their products — best-in-class," he said.

Colored wire, a product that's been around for a while, is starting to gain more traction because of increased demand generated from local building codes and inspections, said Pete deSteiger, CEO, Raymond de Steiger, Inc., Sterling Heights, MI.

Other new products mentioned by Top 200 distributors included:

- iTool's tool line
- Leviton Bluetooth controls and load centers
- Landis+Gyr 320A disconnect meter
- Phoenix Contact PLCNext
- Southern States new 3 phase recloser

Inc., Chesapeake, VA, "The biggest lesson we have learned so far is that it's important to be prepared. While no one knew exactly what we were in store for, we have had a formal employee disaster preparedness plan in place since 2002.

"We were able to utilize the strategies laid out in that plan before the pandemic lockdown occurred. We had team meetings to go over the plan and even had a Pandemic Planning Reimbursement program, in which every employee was given $150 to stock up on supplies that could be required for the pandemic. Doing this allowed our employees to feel secure and, along with new cleaning and distancing measures in our office, helped us to keep employee fears low and morale high."

Methodology. In April of this year EW's editors sent out a survey to several hundred distributors. This year we got 2019 sales information on more than approximately 162 Top 200 distributors, either from our survey or from publicly available information on these companies. That's our best response in many years. We also used the Mergent Intellect database to collect data on some companies and used that data in combination with past survey responses and other publicly available information to include these distributors in the Top 200.

Many of these companies asked us to use their sales data confidentially and only for placement on the listing. In those situations where a distributor is large enough to make the listing but did not respond to our surveys, if we have reliable sales or employee data from the past two years, we will place them on the listing using a sales-per-employee average.

Over the past two years, we have had more distributors ask us to use their sales data confidentially, so when you see a "NA" (Not Available) for 2019 revenues, that most often means we have the data but are not releasing it publicly.

Strictly by the numbers. According to EW estimates, this year's 200 companies run at least 9,083 North American branches. Take out branches run by W.W. Grainger, Lake Forest, IL, and Fastenal Inc., Winona, WI, and the full-line and specialty distributors in the Top 200 run more than 6,969 locations. It's interesting to note that Fastenal, which depends on sales of electrical products for 4.7% of its $5.3 billion in 2019 sales, has 2,162 locations in North America.

From the 104 full-line electrical distributors that provided both sales and employee data, we estimate that EW's Top 200 full-line distributors averaged $702,924 in sales per employee.
