

Navah Little, 12

“I want to go to the fabric district with Alicia Keys to make cool clothes, then wear them to the 40/40 Club and eat French fries all night.” Make it happen:

At the edge of the garment district, you'll find the Fashion Class (21 W. 39th St., nr. Sixth Ave., fourth fl.; 646-329-6663), a sewing and design program for children ages 6 to 18. Throughout summer, Fashion Star wannabes can take two-week classes ($350 to $500; dates vary), complete with visits to designer showrooms and a climactic runway show. After graduation, wear your best homemade outfit to Sony Wonder Technology Lab (550 Madison Ave., nr. 56th St.; 212-833-8100); although Alicia Keys won't be there, you can create a remix of her Grammy Award-winning song “Empire State of Mind (Part II)” at the interactive Music Mixer station, which debuted last year. For dinner, head to Serendipity 3 (225 E. 60th St., nr. Second Ave.; 212-838-3531). With its $1,000 Golden Opulence sundae and just-added $295 Wagyu hamburger, it's as expensive as bottle service at Jay-Z's nightclub. Advance orders required; no strollers allowed. Photo: Danny Kim

