All About the Turkey TURKEY LIFE CYCLE

Directions: After reading the 'Turkey Life Cycle' fact poster, answer the questions below in complete sentences.

1 How does a mother turkey keep her eggs safe?

2 What does a baby turkey look like when it hatches?

3 What kind of foods do poults eat?

4 What is a male turkey known for?

TURKEY LIFE CYCLE

A turkey's life begins as an egg. The mother turkey, called a hen, makes a nest on the ground and lays her eggs. She sits on them to keep them warm and safe.

After about 28 days, the eggs begin to hatch. Baby turkeys, called poults, peck their way out of the shells. They are very small and covered with soft, fluffy feathers.

At first, poults stay close to their mother. She protects them and helps them find food. Poults eat insects, seeds, and berries as they grow.

In just a few weeks, the poults start to grow larger and stronger. Their soft feathers are replaced with bigger feathers, and they begin to look more like young turkeys.

As they grow into adult turkeys, they can run fast and even fly short distances. Male turkeys are called toms, and they are known for their big tail feathers and loud gobbling sound.

When turkeys are fully grown, hens lay eggs of their own and the life cycle starts all over again.
