XAQUIXE HANDBLOWN GLASS

Studio Xaquixe creates with a mind towards social and environmental impact. The vision for the studio is to create high-quality glass from original designs while avoiding environmental destruction and to expand its impact — aiming for appreciation of glass as an art form and for sustainability as a culture. Xaquixe is the only art glass studio of its kind in the region, committed to innovation in its art, as well as to innovation in its community in Oaxaca, México.

The Studio Xaquixe Glass Collection is handblown from recycled glass collected from the local communities surrounding Oaxaca. The studio is a pioneer in glass recycling and the use of recycled glass in fine art glass. Studio Xaquixe initiated a glass waste collection program in Oaxaca that allows the artisans to use only 5% raw material — the other 95% is entirely recycled — to create the studio's glass collections.

Studio Xaquixe has also pioneered the use of waste vegetable oil as its primary energy source, rather than propane. It may sound surprising, but the vegetable oil used for frying food can create enough energy to melt glass at 1300 °C. More than 80% of the energy that the Studio uses everyday to fire its glass furnace comes from waste vegetable oil collected from local restaurants. Without propane, CO2 emissions are almost zero and the local environment is not contaminated with waste vegetable oil.

The studio creates sustainable livelihood opportunities by training and employing artisans from the local communities. Each hand blown glass piece varies slightly in color and form, lending itself to the unique story of the individual artisan who crafted it.
