Product Specifications

JustIngredients Ltd product specifications make reference to the allergen status of each product and indicate if the product is an allergen or if an allergen has been intentionally added to a final product.

Where specific product or country of origin risks have been identified, advisory statements will also be displayed on the relevant product specification.

Segregation

JustIngredients Ltd uses approved suppliers who are aware of the need for segregation and specific handling procedures for known allergens during processing and storage to reduce the likelihood of cross contamination. JustIngredients Ltd cannot guarantee that allergenic products are transported separately.

Labelling

JustIngredients Ltd supplies labelled products which refer to the allergens present or traces of allergens which may be present (where a risk from adventitious contamination has been identified e.g. at crop level).

Customers manufacturing or repacking these products should consider their own labelling requirements based on the information given for each product and this allergen policy statement. Additional trace labelling information is the customers' responsibility, JustIngredients Ltd will work with customers to give additional information, where requested, to allow customers' to carry out a risk assessment on individual products.

Customer notification

Customers will be alerted of any issues relating to the presence of allergens that constitute a significant food safety risk.
