Their position helps tell you if I’m sad, relaxed, or scared, but only when you read my whole body can my story be declared.

If I look alert with my ears forward and erect, I might be interested, engaged, or excited for what’s next.

But if you see my ears pinned back, tight against my head, please know that I’m scared, anxious, or feeling sad.

Floppy, folded, large or small, our ears come in all shapes and sizes consisting of 18 muscles or more.

It depends on the dog how we look when we’re relaxed, some ear types stand up while others lay a little flat.

No matter our ear type, size, or breed, we all talk with our bodies to tell you what we need.

My Ears Express how I am feeling. And also hear sounds at higher-frequencies than your ears are hearing.
