If my mouth is closed, and my face and body are real tight, Understand I’m concerned, I don’t want to bite.

If my mouth is open or closed with my ears or lips pulled back, I am scared and need you to cut me some slack.

Now, if my mouth is open and my ears and face are relaxed, I am happy and in the right place to relax and kick back.

I would appreciate some space to help me feel better. Remember, my body tells my story and writes all my letters.

And if my mouth is open, ears forward, and teeth showing, I’m asking you to stop, back off, and get going.

You can see me talking. Watch me from front to rear. My body is my language, if you watch carefully, you will hear.

My Mouth Matters. I speak without saying a word. But watch my whole body to understand what you’ve heard.
