

JACKIE ROBINSON

Jackie Robinson excelled at many sports – track and field, football, baseball, tennis, and basketball. Jackie attended UCLA and won the NCAA Championship for the long jump. After college, Robinson played professional football, but his career ended when he was drafted for World War II. After the war, Jackie worked his way up from minor league baseball to becoming the first African American to play in the major leagues when he joined the Brooklyn Dodgers.

