Quado 4-Leg Mitchell Base Stand Setup

- Loosen the telescopic ratchet knob of the Quado Stand to extend the legs.

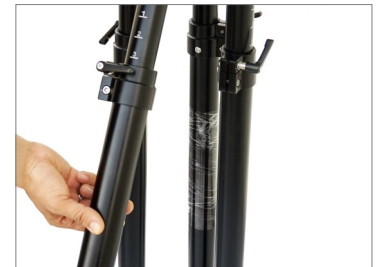

Note: Quado stand has an angle marking of 0-9 on all the legs. Angle markings make sure all the stand legs are out at the same angle.

- Tighten the ratchet knob to the desired angle according to your setup requirements.

- Loosen the leg rotating knob of the quado stand, open all four legs equally according to the requirement and tighten the knob back.

Note: Four locking knobs help to set the Stand legs accurately and firmly. In addition, a toothed locking mechanism on the top of the legs helps securely lock the legs at the desired position.

Note: Quado can go down flat on the floor as 4" and function just as low as a hi-hat, or as a 1'6" mini stand or go up as high as full 3'9" height.

Fluid Head Mounting on Quado Stand

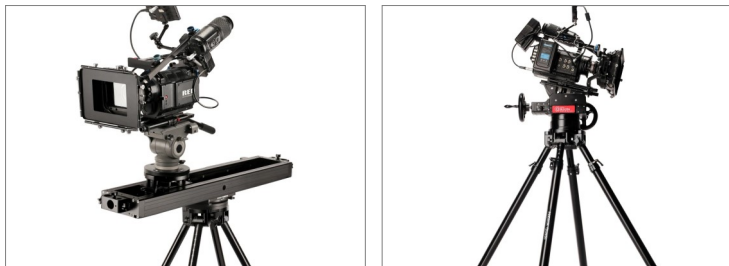

- To mount a 100mm or 150mm or any other fluid head (Not-Included) on the Quado Mitchell Base Stand, you must first install a 150mm bowl mount (Not-Included), as shown in the images.

- To mount 150mm fluid head (Not-Included), insert it into the bowl through the screw and secure it with the knob at the bottom. Now you can mount the camera set-up as per your requirement.

Note: It works efficiently with equipment such as Camera Slider and Geared Heads. When using with Sliders, open the legs as per the length of the Slider for better Stability.
