

Galerie

ART + CULTURE INTERIORS STYLE + DESIGN DESTINATIONS SUBSCRIBE

The Winter Show Cochairs Share Their Favorite Things from This Year's Edition

We asked Brian J. McCarthy, Annabelle Selldorf, and Amelia Handegan to share what caught their eye before the fair opens

by GALERIE EDITORS
JANUARY 21, 2020

The highly anticipated Winter Show, now in its 66th year, kicks off on January 24 with 72 fine-and decorative-arts dealers showing objects made across 5,000 years of history at the historic Park Avenue Armory on New York's Upper East Side. The fair presents everything from jewelry and antiques to arms and old manuscripts, and this year's highlights include a special exhibition, "Unrivaled," which brings together works from the Hispanic Society Museum and Library, as well as a selection of some 50 terrestrial and celestial globes at Daniel Crouch Rare Books. As always, there are treasures to be found for all. In the lead-up, we asked the fair's three cochairs to share items that caught their eye and how they would incorporate them in their designs. Read on below.

BRIAN J. MCCARTHY

Known for his sumptuous, polished style, Brian J. McCarthy launched his design studio over 25 years ago and has designed breathtaking homes from Monaco to Gstaad.

Magnificent Early Naive School domestic animal portrait depicting seven dogs in a stylized landscape (circa 1770).

Photo: Courtesy of Robert Young Antiques

1. Folk Art and Furniture at Robert Young Antiques

"This London dealer is one of my first stops at the Winter Show every year. Robert Young has such a curious eye, and not only do they have incredibly authentic original English and European folk art and furniture, their background and displays are also works of art. Everything they bring—and do—has such soul."