

CONTEMPORARY COLLABORATIONS

The current display is the third in a series of Contemporary Collaborations, showcasing works by emerging artists, who explore the relationship between historic and modern works of art. The artist can choose any object from RYA's large collection of naive, primitive and folk art, and display it within a modern context by referencing material, texture and aesthetics. This collaboration, curated by Erin Hughes, will occur three times a year, and the artist's work will occupy the gallery window for a month, in this case, Amba Sayal-Bennett, with An Unusual Arrangement. She is a sculpture student at the Royal College of Art, which is currently expanding its operations with a £108m flagship building across the road, developing a campus and cultural quarter designed by Herzog & de Meuron and scheduled to open in 2021
