Today: Bravura Booths, Part 2

Robert Young Antiques

Robert Young Antiques' booth at the Winter Show.

The London gallery prides itself on its atmospheric style of presentation and display. An air of eccentric sophistication pervades their booth, which is full of carefully arranged vignettes of vernacular furniture and folk art that evoke the warmth of a rustic English home. It's a beloved old cashmere sweater of a space. robertyoungantiques.com

Notable works include a finely sculpted artist's mannequin from northern Europe, made from pine about 1850, which perches on a marriage chest beneath an oil-on-canvas portrait of a shaggy dog in a stylized landscape, c. 1830 . . .

. . . as well as a leather bombard—an old-fashioned pitcher—of about 1790, resting on a hefty sycamore butcher's serving table among candlesticks and tankards.
