

We inspire and educate the public about the natural and cultural heritage resources of America's public lands.

The Public Lands Interpretive Association partners with the Bureau of Land Management and the USDA Forest Service in the Southwest to develop educational materials and programs, provide information to the public, and enhance visitor experiences on public lands.

We operate visitor center stores, manage campgrounds, and staff an information center to provide guidance on how to recreate responsibly.

Revenue from store sales and campground fees help us better serve visitors to public lands and create programs to get people of all ages outdoors.

Students in the Caver Quest Academy program get to explore one of New Mexico's most unique caves.

Thank You for Your Support!

Your Membership Supports Public Lands in the Southwest.

Since 1981, the Public Lands Interpretive Association has partnered with federal agencies to enhance visitor services on public lands.

Your membership helps us provide needed aid to our land management agency partners through our interpretive services and programs on public lands.

PLIA produces educational materials for our public land partners, like the Junior Ranger Guide for Río Grande del Norte National Monument.

Membership Benefits

In addition to discounts at PLIA you'll get:

A premium commemorating our programs.

Monthly email newsletter and event invites.

PLIA UPDATE—AUGUST 2023

We're grateful for some relief as Albuquerque finally broke its 77-day dry streak this past week. Across the Southwest, a late monsoon is forming gradually and hopefully our deserts and forests will see some relief before winter.

With excessive heat dominating the last month, outdoor activity has slowed down a touch in lower elevations. That means we're continuing to seek out new opportunities for recreation in our high-elevation mountain ranges and sky islands.
