THE EDIT

Transition tired skin into the new season by subbing in emulsions that are light to the touch but heavy on hydration. By Kate Lancaster

Now normal-to-oily skin types can join the DR. BARBARA STURM cult with the new Face Cream Light, $245, which offers the same regenerative ingredients as the original moisturiser in a lighter, nongreasy formula. The satiny texture works to soothe, restore and protect against free radical damage while calming any irritation or sensitivity in the skin.

The Serum Stick, $73, goes on like a nourishing balm to hydrate the areas of the face that need it the most, such as laugh lines or persistent dry patches. Glide it on over makeup to revive afternoon crepiness, or add a natural glow to the high points of the face.

Finally, a serum that can be touched up throughout the day. TATCHA'S with a powerful mix of hyaluronic acid, niacinamide and Munapsys (a trademarked topical alternative to Botox) that promises to fill out fine lines and even skin texture.

but perhaps none more so than hydration. DR. LEWINN'S Line Smoothing

Complex S8 Hyaluronic Acid Boosting Essence, $75, supercharges moisture levels five types of ceramides. In short? It'll all but eliminate trans-seasonal stress from skin.

Eye creams are a divisive topic, but Chanel's new offering is no ordinary emulsion. After 12 years of research, Chanel scientists have created a patented compound that has been extensively tested to address a number of concerns. The clever formula individually detects and targets dark circles, puffiness and a lack of firmness to tone, visibly tighten and brighten
