EDITIONS FALL 2023

Banned Books

Can't. The word is a roadblock. A wall, tall and wide. Can't is the word of censorship.

Book banning in the United States is growing, affecting communities of all sizes, in all states, leaving millions of students corralled by flaring sides. When faced with this type of can't, what can we do? We at The Creative Company will continue to embrace books and readers. We will continue to create and provide access to content that nurtures the idea of limitless possibility. Banned Book, new this season from award-winning author Jonah Winter, offers a satirical take on censorship, one designed to encourage discussion of rights and choices and what becomes of a book that's banned.

Chasing the Sun

An Arctic tern can fly as many as 50,000 miles in its annual migration, and as this bird chases summer across the hemispheres, it sees more sunlight than any other living thing. In this luminous celebration of such astonishing aerial feats, author and visual artist Timothy Musso charts the migratory path of an Arctic tern family with intricately designed woodcut illustrations that propel the reader along as a partner on a most incredible journey. Back matter expands on the poetic text with additional details about the Arctic tern and other animals. Thumb through the top right corner of the pages to see a flipbook animation of the Arctic tern.

Timothy Musso is an artist and naturalist who exhibits work internationally. The themes of his artwork are inspired by international cross-country backpacking in remote locations. On a trip to the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, he encountered the Arctic tern. His fascination with nature, innate curiosity, and preferred medium of woodcut printing coalesced to create Chasing the Sun. This is his first picture book.

Banned Book

“The words were dangerous.” For as long as people have been expressing their opinions in writing, there have been those in positions of power who have succeeded in censoring those thoughts. In this timely and provocative parable, a book is first subjected to redaction, then removal from a library. What becomes of a banned book? Is it really just landfill fodder in the end? Readers must decide for themselves.

Armando's Island

Armando's home is the rainforest—he knows its sights, smells, tastes, and sounds. He even knows its moods. From the bottom of the forest floor to the top of the emergent layer, the trees are also home to a multitude of creatures. When outsiders begin laying claim to and destroying the surrounding landscape, the displaced animals find refuge with Armando in the only remaining pocket of untouched forest, his “island.” As people come in and animals are forced out, this poignant tale shows the cumulative and disastrous effects of Amazonian deforestation.

A born storyteller, Marsha Diane Arnold is the author of many books for children and makes her home in Florida. Her first Creative Editions title was Lights Out.

Anne Yvonne Gilbert has designed and illustrated children's books, postage stamps, record sleeves, and posters, infusing her work with a fairy-tale sensibility especially befitting the subject matter of Armando's Island. After many years spent in Canada, she and her husband make their home in northern England.

Opposites Are Natural

A young child observes a growing forest through changing seasons in this beautifully illustrated board book from Creative Editions. As the gentle narration advances, the changing trees and animals provide opportunities to observe, compare, and contrast, highlighting opposites in nature. Watercolor scenes help even the youngest of readers conceptualize pairs of opposites and point out the differences, while descriptive words help build vocabulary. Sturdy board pages are easy for toddlers and preschoolers to hold for countless viewings.
