1

Start with one sideboard. Partially insert only one screw per slot, leaving the tip protruding out on the other side of the board. Please note that the Wiwiurka seal is stamped on the exterior face of the sideboard.

*You may place the sideboard on top of a table or bench to make screw-driving more easier.

2

Align the first slat at one end of the sideboard, aligning the pre-drilled hole with the tip of the screw you previously inserted halfway. Fasten the screw without tightening in full and use a toothpick or alike tool as guiding aide to align the slat with the second hole. *Do not insert the second screw until the slat is properly aligned, otherwise the screw may pierce through the wood damaging the piece.

3

Repeat the same process for the rest of the slats and the rod, which should be fully inserted in the pre-drilled slots before screwing it into the sideboard.

4

Flip the sideboard to place the second one on top and start screwing in all the slats and the rod without tightening them in full, always using your guiding tool to align the predrilled holes and avoid wood damage.

5

Flip the Wiwiurka 4in1 Rocker upside down, in its climbing arch position, and apply downward pressure in order to ground it. You may hear some tiny cracks which is normal when the pieces are sitting into place. Once you have verified that the rocker is properly aligned and grounded, tighten all the screws.
