

Making period care just as accessible as toilet paper.

Why Free Period Care?

Labour codes have changed in Canada and all federally regulated organizations are required to provide free pads and tampons to workers, just like toilet paper.

But it's also good business.

- Over 26% of the population menstruates
- 86% of employees who menstruate get an unexpected period at work.
- Free menstrual care supports the 34% who would otherwise leave work to get products.
- Providing sustainable period products meets four of the 17 UN Sustainability Goals.

Providing Free Period Care

Reduces absenteeism

Instead of leaving work to seek products, employees are comfortable staying at work with onsite period care products.

Bolsters company ESG & DEI

Providing sustainable period products supports environmental initiatives and social governance while bolstering company values.

Supports employee wellness

Quality onsite period products supports wellness by increasing comfort and reducing the chance of irritation and infection, which could otherwise contribute to missed work.

Increases equal opportunities

Onsite period care means no more missed meetings and decreased productivity due to a biological function and increased advancement opportunities and work satisfaction for everyone.

Ready for change? join joni and the 100+ organizations across Canada already providing sustainable products to their workers, creating more equitable workplaces and working towards DEI and SDG initiatives. Learn how our turnkey solutions make it easy by emailing sales@getjoni.com.