

THE ATLANTAN MODERN LUXURY

Game
Changer

GAME OF THRONES' NIKOLAJ
COSTER-WALDAU
IS SLAYING IT

SUN-SOAKED
STYLE

MEN'S FASHION
BRIGHTENS UP

Men of the Moment

4 ATLANTA
TASTEMAKERS
TAKING THE LEAD

Plus

The Fabulous Return of French Food & A Look
Back at Super Bowl LIII

SHOP TO IT

MARKET DAY

Hats off to Kim Wilson of Lucy's Market for her 10 years in business.

What started out as a produce stand on a street corner has evolved into a quintessential Buckhead stop. Lucy's Market, which first opened at an abandoned gas station and now calls Andrews Square home, has expanded from simply carrying produce to stocking a dazzling array of products, from food and specialty items to wine and hostess gifts. Helmed by proprietor Kim Wilson, the place is packed to the brim with everything one needs for entertaining, including popular prepared items from Atlanta favorites like The Hungry Peach and Strive Foods. At Lucy's Market, it's not unusual to run into neighbors and friends while on the hunt for a primo avocado—or a casserole fit for a family of five. Up next for the ever-evolving specialty store? Grab-and-go floral arrangements, plus Wilson is in the process of debuting her own line of signature food products. Next time you're in, check out Wilson's special 10 Favorite Things basket, the perfect hostess gift—and celebration of the consummate hostess, Wilson herself. 56 E. Andrews Drive NW, lucysmarket.com —LF

NUMBER CRUNCH

An Atlanta institution beloved by many generations, Johnny's Hideaway is celebrating 40 glorious years. Whether you went there as a 20-something or still bust a mean move at the Buckhead haunt now, it's one of the premier spots in town for everything from a couple's night out to bachelorette parties and more. So long as you keep your drinks off the dance floor, Johnny's will be around for another 40 years to help the next generation shake their groove things. 3771 Roswell Road NE, johnnyshideaway.com —Lauren Finney

TECH TALK

BACK TO the FUTURE

Atlanta takes Hertz and CLEAR's biometric screening technology for a test-drive. —Irina Talty

As one of the busiest airports in the country, Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport is always about self-improvement. Enter Hertz (hertz.com) and CLEAR's (clearme.com) rental car biometric screening kiosk, an elite technology that allows customers to skip the counter, instead picking their rental car and driving immediately to the kiosk, which will then scan the customer's face, iris and fingerprint to identify them (talk about high-tech). The technology is more popular than you might think: Biometric screening is on the rise, making appearances at airport security, baseball games and even Walt Disney World. Hertz's kiosks will soon be available at 40-plus locations, including the LAX and JFK international airports. The program turns a crowded-counter experience into smooth sailing, saving customers an approximated 75 percent of their wait time—which means more time spent lounging by your resort's pool with a cocktail in hand.