REVIEWS

- “This story is so unique, that it is like an inspirational poem that touches the heart at the same time of showing that everyone has their own story. We often forget things are relative.” Mary K. Pre-K Educator
- “Beautiful illustrations. Such a deep but simple story that is so needed in these difficult times. With mental illness and isolation being so prevalent, stories like this remind us that people matter, and reaching out in kindness is so needed.” Sam F. Grade 3 Educator
- “I absolutely love this story. As a director and advisor of many centers, I love finding stories that touch the simple emotions we all experience. Children can relate so easily to kindness. I also love how this story bridges the gap of generations with two elderly members, who may be alone. We used to have this sense of community before so much travel and technology. Wouldn't it be wonderful to start a movement that brought us back to neighborhood connections?” Cecile T. M.Ed. Director, Consultant
