SS METHOD × RED EARTH

The Monsoon Room

*Black coffee, and outside, the clouds brew in colours of gray melancholy,
Turn up the volume, get that easy chair and look out of the window -
From the sanctuary of this space, the city seems so meditative;
The sea pans out across horizons, waves break at the shore
And then the clouds hang low and burst open, and the haze grows...*

The Monsoon Room at Method, Bandra creates a moody haze around the city's monsoon with photography, graphic, text / poetry and monsoon inspired merchandise.

From documentative to meditative-expressive bodies of work; three young artists essay their own whimsical interpretations of the Monsoon in Mumbai in their highly individualistic styles.

Jaidev Tripathy

Often captivated by spaces, perspectives, and human behaviour in intricate relationships with their surroundings, Jaidev has set on a journey to document these into narratives within everyday context.

His illustrations form a core part of this journey, depicting urban spaces and narratives. The expressive hand sketches uniquely merging with digital painting prompt a moment of pause, as one viscerally engages with the visual stories.

Method

“The Revolution introduced me to art, and in turn art introduced me to the Revolution!” –Albert Einstein

It's unclear as to whether Einstein was talking about a political or scientific revolution, but it is evident that art and breaking away are intermingled at the core.

Method is an introspective and “extrospective” approach to art and the world in which it currently exists. By acknowledging that limitlessness is an inherent characteristic of creativity, we fall beyond the domain of predetermined outcomes not only as artists but as a community. In doing so, we transpose and expand with the movement of art. This cultivates collaboration and experimentation for the purpose of expression as well as discovery.

At present, Method has two physical spaces in Mumbai. Method Kala Ghoda primarily showcases fine art and installations. Method Bandra focuses on new media, photography, and human connectivity.
