RADDISH: THE COMPANY THAT BRING FAMILIES TOGETHER IN THE KITCHEN

POSTED: 11/20/2013

Raddish has jumped onto the subscription box trend but put a twist to it. Instead of sending food, they are sending you recipe guides, skill cards, creative activities, grocery list, and all the essentials to bring your family together in the kitchen. Raddish aims to teach your youngest little ones how to eat healthy, make healthy choices, and basic cooking skills.

"Rad dish" uses big, easy to understand pictures to make cooking fun to the young sous chefs and to help them understand the steps. Raddish isn't just for fun; its roots are based in education. Safety and proper techniques are very important aspects of the monthly Raddish box. There are also trivia cards for positive table talk to learn healthy life lessons. Raddish connects cooking skills with science, culture, math, creativity, history, geography, nutrition, reading and agriculture. Raddish just isn't about food, it's about learning lifelong skills in the kitchen that carry over. Raddish is great for your little chefs from ages 3 through age 12.

Raddish was created by Samantha Barnes who founded Kitchen Kid, a mobile cooking school in Los Angeles. Her mission is to spread Raddish's mission across the country. We found Raddish on Kickstarter and thought that you all would love to check them out!
