I am a winter Olympic fanatic. I guess it's no surprise: I started skiing at age 3 and grew up idolizing Nancy Kerrigan. Over the years, I've raced down the Olympic bobsled and luge courses at the Utah Olympic Park, jumped off the K20 ski jump and cheered for countless freestyle, Nordic, and ice hockey athletes. During my senior year of college, I spent a semester researching how the Olympic Games stimulate patriotism and, watching the Opening Ceremony live in Salt Lake, will remain one of the most inspiring moments of my life.

Who knew that one-day my passion for food, family, and the Olympics would come together in a little brown box?

Raddish is a subscription box that delivers illustrated recipe guides, culinary adventures and family fun right to your door. In honor of the 2014 Winter Games, we've created an Olympic themed box that will inspire your whole family to get cooking! This month's engaging, enriching and easy to follow recipes include a breakfast fit for a champion, a protein packed dinner and the cutest Olympic torch cupcakes you've ever seen. In addition, we've included several activities and crafts to host your own family kitchen games and other fun surprises, too!

Kids love sports and the spectacle of the Olympics is something the whole family can celebrate together. During the Opening Ceremony's Parade of Nations, grab an atlas or globe and show your kids where the athletes call home (My children love this atlas iPad app). Kids will no doubt delight in the flips and tricks of snowboarders and aerialists. And don't miss the historical jumps in women's ski jumping – the sport will be included in the Olympics for the first time this year!

Sochi is just around the corner and the February Raddish box ships soon. Make this month delicious and spirited & subscribe to Raddish today! For more information about Raddish, please visit: www.raddishkids.com and connect with us:
