

FIRE RATED MINERAL FIBRE GLAZING TAPES

WHITE FS9009 "CERAMIC TYPE" GLAZING TAPE

Available since 1998, FS9009 is manufactured using spinning technology, and is based on a calcium-magnesium-silica chemistry. It gives excellent thermal and physical stability up to its operational limit of 1100°C, and has a melting point in excess of 1330°C.

FS9009 contains no carcinogenic ceramic fibres so is a vast improvement over older style ceramic tapes. FS9009 can be used in a whole range of applications as thermal insulation, particularly as glazing tape in fire rated steel and timber doors. It is lightweight and flexible in use and is generally only available in white, although it can be supplied in black, see below. Please note FS9009 is only suitable for internal use. If being used externally it is suggested that a bead of silicone mastic is applied to seal the FS9009 and prevent ingress of water.

It has been included in successful fire tests up to 4 hours on steel doors and 1 hour on timber doors with LoPro vision frames and Slimport circular portholes. WF Report No 190621/A Issue 4 dated 17.09.2018 to BS EN 1634-1:2000 and WF Report No 190869 Issue 6 dated 10.04.2018 refer. FS9009 should be subject to 50% compression.

BLACK FS9009 "CERAMIC TYPE" GLAZING TAPE

We have been supplying white FS9009 glazing tape for many years but we have now introduced the most popular sizes in black in response to customer demand. Other sizes may be available depending on quantities required. It gives excellent thermal and physical stability up to its operational limit of 1100°C, and has a melting point in excess of 1330°C. Apart from the colour, all other details are the same as FS9009 white glazing tape above.
