PONCHO

Poncho was my grandparents last dog. In my young mind, he was a wiener dog because of his short legs and long body, but I suspect his pedigree was a neighbourhood combo. His short legs churning, Poncho made valiant efforts to keep up with the three-wheeler tire as we pattered around, teaching us grandchildren that dogs can get close without accident time after time! The rock studded Whitemouth River flowed beside his farm, sometimes a babbling flow with many rocks to be jumped and other times a roaring, turbulent rush with rapids begging to be run. In the middle of the river is a huge rock island, fondly named 'The Whale' by the many grandchildren that frolicked there on hot, summer days. Poncho helped train 20 some grandchildren and was long in happy hunting grounds by the time the 44th appeared.
