

Orbit Turntable Setup Guide

1 Initial setup

- A Place the platter on the center spindle.
- B Slide the dust cover onto the hinges.
- C Connect the power adapter to the jack on the back of your Orbit.
- D Connect to your sound system using the included RCA cables.

2 Belt installation and changing speeds

- A Wrap the belt around the pulley groove. Then hold the belt along the platter's back edge with your right hand.
- B Keeping your right hand in place, use your left hand to guide the belt around the edge of the platter.
- C To change speeds, move the belt to the top pulley groove (33 RPM) or bottom groove (45 RPM).

The belt should be relatively loose – this helps prevent motor vibrations from reaching the stylus and minimizes platter speed variation. Avoid pulling on the belt or pulley during installation.

3 Removing the stylus guard

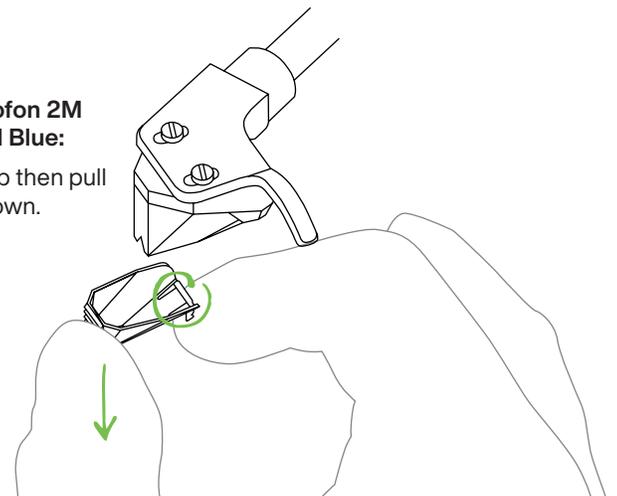

For Audio-Technica, Grado, and Ortofon OM5E:

Pull cover forward until it slides off.

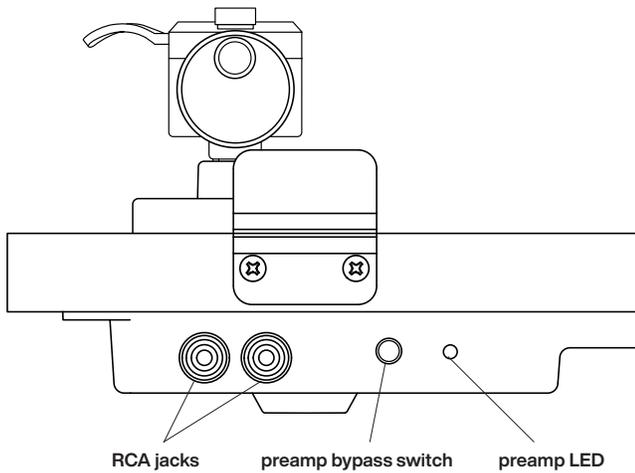

For Ortofon 2M Red and Blue:

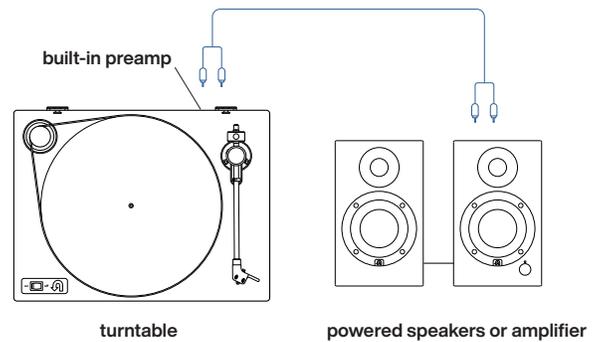

Pinch tab then pull cover down.

Using the built-in phono preamp

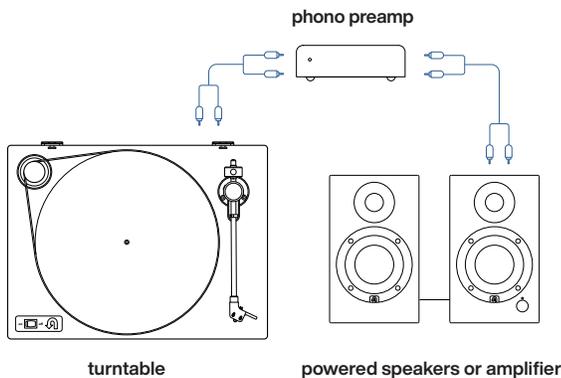

The built-in preamp is set to “on” out of the box. To disable it, press the bypass switch. The preamp is enabled when the LED light is on.

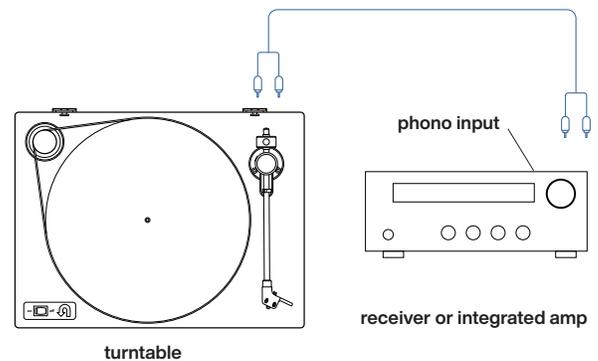

With the built-in preamp enabled, you can connect your Orbit directly to powered speakers or an amplifier using the included RCA cables.

Using an external phono preamp

If your Orbit doesn't have a built-in preamp, you can connect it to a standalone phono preamp then connect to powered speakers or an amplifier.

You can also connect your Orbit directly to any receiver or amplifier that has a clearly marked “phono” input on the back.
