Five in a Row “ca rô”

In Vietnamese, “ca rô” means checkered pattern. It is hard to find any child in Vietnam that does not enjoy playing “ca rô” board game, a very popular game played on a checkered piece of paper, usually Elementary Student Notebook. Inspired by such dear childhood memories, Maztermind wishes to bring back the familiar checkered pattern of “ca rô” to your living room at a completely new level, basic yet very elegant. Five in a Row, a seemingly simple game, can be very complicated and challenging. At the same time, it leaves you nostalgic feeling of your childhood.

Set up: Each player chooses to play  or .

When begin, the player with  moves first by placing an  anywhere on the board.

The players take turn to place their  or  on any empty square on the board.

You win if you're the first one to have an unbroken row of five  or  horizontally, vertically, or diagonally.

A draw happens when both players agree on it or when there's no empty square left on the board.

Variations:  can move first instead of .
