ALOIS LAGEDER

Nestled in the emerald green Dolomites within the Alto Adige region of Italy, Alois Lageder is a 6th generation family-owned winery creating biodynamic wines in unison with nature.

Alois Lageder's roots go back to 1823 when the young craftsman Johann Lageder set himself up as a wine merchant in Bolzano. His successors started to produce their own wines and acquired a number of vineyards. Alois III, the great-grandson of the founder of the business, saw the variety of climate zones in Alto Adige as one of the region's strengths and in 1934 purchased the Löwengang wine estate in Magrè, in the southern part of Alto Adige.

Today, the 50-hectare family-owned vineyards are farmed biodynamically.

Alois Lageder wines and ethos align harmoniously with Katie Lee and Chef Jake Sanderson's dynamic and regionally inspired 5-course menu, created especially for the third of Katie's sumptuous Wine Dinners at her award-winning Ballpark Village location.

These nights are magical events which allow Katie Lee and Helena Lageder to tell the story of the Veneto region through their love for ingredients and time-honored traditions. Katie will be cracking a wheel of Grand Parano from the region to share amongst guests, while the Kasimu Taylor Quartet plays live jazz. Guests will receive a gift and are encouraged to take home the wines sampled throughout the night, which will be available for order through Bommarito Wines.
