

L-Shaped Landings

Many staircases have landings that are rectangular except for a bite taken out by a bannister. If this is the case in your home, you may need an L-shaped landing. Landings are of course optional, but they are very nice for continuity of design, step height and texture, as well as for sound buffering.

If you decide to order an L-shaped landing, what we will need from you is a paper template of the exact landing rug size and shape, marked “this side up”. Make sure you have allowed for a border to match that of the adjacent steps. If you are more comfortable with providing basic measurements, we will need the overall rectangle dimensions, as well as those of the bite.

*Please note that many landings may not be true rectangles, so it is highly advisable to make templates. We will assume 90° angles if templates are not provided, and cannot take responsibility for incorrect measurements.
