This Just In - CV is Hot Off the Press!

Cedar Valley Growers makes the front page! Recently, The Daily Record of Wooster, OH was out to visit our farm for a tour and to learn a little more about who we are and what we do. We are so grateful for the press coverage, providing the opportunity to reach more people in the community and hopefully enlighten them on what got us started in this industry, diminish any potential skepticism, and mention the many benefits that hemp can provide.

"We want to help people understand that these products are safe and are very beneficial."

-Shawn Cutter, Chairman

The recent newspaper article, published on December 3rd, covered the details of what it was like getting our business up and running, the hurdles and chaos that occurred within the first year, the real difference between hemp and marijuana, and what our first outdoor harvest was like here at Cedar Valley. Cheers to a New Connection!

Making a positive impact on the community by educating people on the benefits of hemp and hemp products is at the top of our priority list here at Cedar Valley. We want to spread knowledge on the countless benefits that hemp and CBD have on the human body and mind. By educating people on what research has proven, it can help eliminate the negative connotation that often accompanies the plant. However, in order to make a significant impact in a community, there needs to be a strong connection. A new opportunity to make this strong connection to the community has recently presented itself with an establishment that boldly represents local loyalty. The Wooster Area Chamber of Commerce supports growing stronger together within the respective community and we couldn't be more grateful for this new partnership.

Cedar Valley Growers recently became a member of the Wooster Area Chamber of Commerce, and we look forward to strengthening our local business with such a reputable and positive force.

5...4...3...2... Happy Harvest!

It's the season for counting down the clock and Cedar Valley is counting down to our next harvest that is fast approaching! Our 6th indoor harvest is set for January 24, 2022! Currently, the plants are starting into the flowering stage. You can see their current growth status from the images on this page!

As you can see, the greenhouse is really booming! In several of the close-up images to the left, the flowers are very apparent. The bud or flower is the most useful part of the plant when it comes to extracting CBD oil that will later be added to products.

Current Growth!

DID YOU KNOW...there are male and female flowers on a hemp plant? Stay connected to our blog to read more on how to identify the difference and why it is important! Video coverage and explanations from our COO, Josh Cutter to be included! (Coming Soon)

Can you guess which is more desirable? Male or Female?

Countdown to Harvest:
January 24, 2022!
