The 2014 Mountain Road Chardonnay was aged for nine months in neutral French oak and comes in at 13.3% alcohol. Showing its wood a bit more than the Pheasant Hill reviewed this issue, this eventually rises up and shows its fruit and freshness, too. Lighter in style, it drinks nicely and has a better finish than mid-palate, although it seems more elegant than thin. It will wind up being a perfect food wine. There were 68 cases produced.
