CAVANDIS AND THE SNOTS

The forty fifth regiment returned from the expedition to the jungles of Amerka a broken ruin. Its Orcs were despondent and clad in dirty rags and feather after being disgraced at the battle for Beynt Ayres. In Londinium the Orseguards was near to disbanding the regiment and pacelling out its troops. Luckily a wealthy Orc who made his tin in the lace mills of Notnum town came along. In return for commission as Major he saved the regiment and got it sent to Al-Garvey.

Though there are other officers over him in the 45th it often falls to Major Listorc to make many decision for not only does his money supply the Orcs but he turned out to be a very good officer too. The regiment earned the nickname 'Snotters Lads' after the battles of Roarica and Vilero where they did well but due to illness picked up in Amerka their noses ran continually!

A Major Figure

In this article we give you game statistics for Major 'Frorc' Cavandis Listorc of the 45th Orcringham regiment of the line. This is only one of the possible profiles for this very useful mounted and dismounted officer in your collection. Changing the uniform facings he can become an officer for any other line regiment or he could be an aide de camp or personality. In green he could be of the 105th Rifles! The choice is yours.

Here are the rules for this character in FlintClogue:

Major Cavandis Listorc

This character is an Albion Orc who is of Regular type and Experienced level. He is armed with a sword and a mighty bicorne (though this is not strictly a weapon!) and has the following special abilities. When in command of a section of Orcs or Ratmen or Hob-Goblins as well as Bog Orcs he adds +1 to the Discipline rating of every section member. However despite the respect his troops have for him he is a bit of a rich arse and this sometimes boils over in battle. Each turn when activated the nearest friendly section member who is BEHIND the Major and in line of sight must pass an immediate steady check. If they fail then that character may take no action for the turn except for pulling faces and make rude gestures aimed at Listorc. He rides a Heavy Horse. He costs 72 Points.

Here are the rules for this character in Slaughterloo:

MAJOR LISTORC (AVERAGE) (GENERAL) (200 POINTS)

A rich and generally loved officer in the Army of Albion this commander has a neat trick for when things go badly... a big bag of cash!

WHY DO YOU RUN? : As a rich and well loved officer Listorc may elect, once per game, to automatically halt the routing of a single friendly Unit within 45cm. Treat this as if the Unit had rallied on its own back to being Disorganised. Note that unlike the normal rules this may be done at the INSTANT of routing so that the Unit does not have to spend one Turn routing.

Uniform: The Major is dressed in the uniform of a line officer of the Army of Albion. Red tunic and white breeches along with a grey greatcoat, black shoes and bicorne. Braid is gold and straps are white. Alter facings to suit the regiment of choice such as green for the 45th Foot.
