YANI OTHARAN

A NEW GENTLEORC

The ailing Otharman Empire is an exotic and semi magicke place which is filled with contrasts. From the rich bazaars and gardens of Istanbul to the dirt and bloody soaked sands of Aegypt the Sultan rules over many millions. While Urop is far off there are those among the Othari who wish to become more like them. From the Janissaries who have become the 'new model army' to merchants who sell the fashions of Londinium and Lyonesse.

A son of a wealthy Istanbul cloth seller Yani Otharan begged his father for enough gold to travel to Urop and to see for himself the places of sook, smoke and mighty ships. With an agreement and an promise to return to his family in two years time Yani set out from the Blaake Sea for Ostaria to begin his tour.

With little experience of the world outside of his home city and equipped with a lot of coin and an idea of how a 'gentleorc' behaves it was not long until Yani became a real fop. After coming near being robbed he hired an entourage of Dogmen as guides and protectors. Yani Otharan is now on his way to Venna the capital of Ostaria and hopes, despite his guides pleas not to, to meet the Emperor Klaffenhund. The Othari Aristo has attracted a lot of attention with his generous tipping of anyone who crosses his path. There may be a full scale riot!

Rules for Flintloque: If you decide to put this miniature into your games of Flintloque then you can choose one of two routes. Firstly the Othari Aristo is a Regular / Civilian / Othari carrying a concealed standard pistol who is added to any mortal section as a scenario goal or person to protect.

The second route is character based for the Othari Aristo in your games. This character is a Regular / Civilian / Othari armed with a standard pistol and an amount of expected deference. He must command his section but nominates another to act as commander who must remain within 5cm of him at all times. The characters in his section defer to his weath and status and will do as they are told. Every member of the section gains the Aimed Fire bonus to their first shot and +2 in their first melee combat. If he dies then every section member must pass a Shaken test or flee the gaming table. This character has a cost of 86 Points.

Rules for Slaughterloo: If you choose to make use of this miniature in your games of Slaughterloo you can do so in this manner with these optional rules. The Othari Aristo is an additional figure which can be added to the total for any Unit which is on foot and is mortal including Othari but not Ferach Armee. You may have a maximum of Two (2) Aristo's in a Division. You may attach both of them to the same unit if you wish. Keep the miniature in base to base contact with the rear rank of the unit. It is only removed from play if the unit break and routs. It is never affected by enemy direct action such as close combat or ranged fire.

A unit with an Aristo shows deference in expectation of coin and as a result they can add +2 to their Fire Mod for one ranged attack, or +2 to Melee Mod once during play. Once this is done the Aristo is removed from the unit, it is assumed back to a life of luxury having given out coin. Each Aristo has a cost of 20 Points.

Adding to your Valon collection: This code is well suited to players who want civilians in their games and who already have or want to collect some Othari. While not a military person the Aristo could be added to the Al-Hazrad militia as a prisoner or alongside the Household Warriors as a patron. He could be an emissary of the Sultan there to observe and make commanders very nervous for their necks.

Flintloque Scenario Seed: Looking to the picture in this article which was taken during playtesting of the Flintloque rules for it you can see the Othari Aristo with his Dogman guard / guide. Combine this with some bandits and you have a potential robbery. Or an Elvish patrol comes across the travelling group and action ensues. The Dogman shown is from 54050 Valon Civilians an excellent pack of mixed fantasy race characters.
