RODOLFO ABULARACH AND THE NOTION OF THE UNLIMITED

One of the constants in the work of Rodolfo Abularach, an artist from Guatemala is the notion of the unlimited, of a lack of restraint. This idea is inseparable from the plastic values themselves, as well as to the thematic content and significance of his work. In fact, the lack of restraint in his work is presented as a formal value apart from the traditional ones; it is proposed visually as a revalidation of the avant-garde and of the references to a personal biography. In this sense it is impossible no to be reminded of his famous pictures with a single gigantic image of the human eye that made him well known internationally. Here Abularach set forth the explosive force of the theme in infinite variations in which the transformations of an incessant visual movement are multiplied.

Running through the latest series of paintings is a theme in which there is no peace, but neither is there war. Volcanoes in eruption, hells, purgatories, clouds of nights of terror--all depict a fascination with real and imagined violence in nature, that which man has learned to accept in his passage through life. The amplification of the images reaches extraordinary limits, characterizing the artist's work more intensely as a paraphrase of nature, not of its superficial appearance but rather of its spirit and profound essence. It is the struggle of the artist with his universe. Apocalyptic volcanoes that show a recognizable event. The painting itself becomes an event, a visible reply to the technique utilized, to the dominance of the expressive resources and to the cre-

RODOLFO ABULARACH Y LA NOCIÓN DE LA DESMESURA

Una de las constantes en la pintura de Rodolfo Abularach, artista de Guatemala, ha sido la noción de la desmesura. Esta noción está intrínsecamente ligada a los valores plásticos en sí mismos, así como también al contenido temático y significativo de la obra. De hecho la desmesura se presenta en su trabajo como un valor formal aparte de los tradicionalmente conocidos, planteándolo visualmente como una revalorización de las vanguardias y de las referencias a una biografía personal. En este sentido es imposible no comenzar recordando sus famosas pinturas con la única imagen agigantada del ojo humano, que los hicieron internacionalmente conocido. Aquí ya Abularach planteaba la fuerza explosiva del tema en variaciones infinitas, y en las cuales se multiplicaban las transformaciones de un movimiento visual incesante.

La última serie de pinturas trata de una temática en la que no hay paz, pero tampoco hay guerra. Volcanes en erupción, infiernos, purgatorios, nubes de noches de terror, muestran una fascinación por la violencia de la naturaleza real y figurada, la que el hombre aprendido a aceptar en su paso por la vida. La amplificación de las imágenes llega a límites extraordinarios, caracterizando más profundamente la obra del artista, como paráfrasis de la naturaleza, pero no de su apariencia superficial, sino de su espíritu y esencia más profunda. Es la lucha del artista con su universo. Volcanes apocalípticos que muestran un acontecimiento reconocible. La pintura misma se vuelve un

In this new series of large paintings, he continuity of the discourse of the avant-garde that settles in the theme more than in the formal changes, is evident. Now the artist has taken another road. Another stage in his artistic development has begun; the formal constants which have characterized him are present now more than ever. There have been no interruptions but rather the acceptance of a new challenge, the running of another risk, which has meant a big jump. To go beyond the eye to enter the essence of nature shows that Abularach is in his prime. The new theme is a daring visual metaphor of the violence of nature; these are moving images which proclaim the autonomy of mysterious, irresistible forces that seem to detach themselves from the depth of the painting to begin to inhabit the spirit of the viewer. In a colossal and magnificent composition, the forms of mountains stand erect, rivers open, hells are shown. The artist interprets the landscape theme with uncommon force, extracting what is most essential from its expressive character. In this essence, the exterior and interior of the forms and the meanings interpenetrate. There are no signs, except for bits of flames, of human beings that have been transformed into plastic images thanks to the force of the brush stroke, and to the gesture of contained violence. The canvases are pictorial structures, well organized by the play of light and shadow in which a strident light speaks plastically of another light, that which emerges from within the work in a symbolic manner. By means of the treatment of light and shadow, Abularach transfigures one thing for another, creating a telluric order and a cosmic order, that belongs to a story to be imagined by acontecimiento como muestra visible a la técnica utilizada, al dominio de los recursos expresivos, y a las posibilidades creadoras del artista.

En esta nueva serie de grandes pinturas, es evidente una continuidad del discurso de la vanguardia que se asienta en el tema, más que en los cambios formales. Ahora el artista ha tomado otro camino. Otra etapa en su desarrollo artístico se ha iniciado, más que nunca aquellas constantes formales que le han caracterizado se han hecho más presentes. No ha habido interrupciones, sino el gran salto que ha implicado asumir un nuevo reto y correr otro riesgo. Salir del ojo para entrar en naturaleza esencial, demuestra que Abularach está en su tiempo. La nueva temática es una atrevida metáfora visual de la violencia de la naturaleza, ellas son imágenes conmovedoras que promulgan la autonomía de misteriosas fuerzas irresistibles que parecen desprenderse de los más profundo de la pintura para comenzar a habitar el espíritu del espectador. En una colosal y magnífica composición, se yerguen las formas de las montañas, se abren los ríos, se muestran los infiernos. El artista toma el tema del paisaje con una fuerza inusitada, extrayendo de él lo más esencial de su carácter expresivo. En esta esencialidad, el exterior y el interior de las formas y significados se interpenetran. No hay signos, pero si jirones de llamas, de seres humanos, que han sido transformados en imágenes plásticas gracias a la fuerza de la pincelada, del brochazo, del gesto de violencia contenida. Las telas son estructuras pictóricas bien organizadas por el juego de las luces y las sombras, en las que una luz estridente habla plásticamente de otra luz, aquella que emerge de una manera simbólica desde the viewer from the images emphatically located in the space of the representation. Blazing shapes in sputtering movement express violence and mystery.

Abularach creates an abstract reflection of the significance of the figurative theme, converting it into a plastic happening, which is, after all, true painting. By extending the pictorial space in an illusory manner towards the interior of itself by means of a practically non figurative language, the repertory of forms comes even closer to the two levels of reality, the temporal and the eternal. It is not a matter of creating symbols but rather of progressively structuring the space in symbolic articulations that are given to the use of color and form. They are endowed with a visual-tactile character that is directly related to the viewer who looks at the level of memory and of conscience. When presented with a theme such as a volcano, hell, etc., every viewer knows what it is about. This time, however, the viewer knows intuitively that what he is looking at is more than an apparent reality. The artist knows perfectly well what he is searching for.

dentro de la obra. Por medio del tratamiento de la luz y la sombra, Abularach transfigura una cosa por otra, creando un orden telúrico y un orden cósmico, que pertenece a una historia a ser imaginada por el espectador a partir de las imágenes localizadas enfáticamente en el espacio de la representación. Formas en flamígeras, en chisporroteante movimiento, expresan una violencia y un misterio.

Abularach hace una reflexión abstracta del significado de su tema figurativo, convirtiéndolo en un acontecimiento plástico, lo que es al fin y al cabo la verdadera pintura. Al prolongar ilusoriamente el espacio pictórico hacia el interior de sí mismo por medio de un lenguaje prácticamente no figurativo, el repertorio de formas se acerca más a los dos niveles de la realidad, el temporal y el eterno. No se trata de componer signos, sino de estructurar progresivamente el espacio en articulaciones simbólicas que están dadas por el uso del color y de la forma. Ellas serán dotadas de un carácter tactil-visual que se relacionan con el que mira en el nivel de la memoria y de la conciencia. Todo espectador sabe de qué se trata cuando se le ofrece un tema como un volcán, el infierno, etc., solo que esta vez intuye que lo que mira es más que una realidad aparente. El artista sabe perfectamente lo que busca .
