

Accell Reveals UltraAV Mini DisplayPort Y-Cable Docking Station

Optimized for use with the Surface Pro 2 and Surface Pro 3, Accell's Y-Cable Docking Station is Microsoft Designed for Surface licensed.

Fremont, Calif. – May 19, 2015 – Accell, a provider of premium power products, computer and mobile device accessories, today unveiled the company's new UltraAV Mini DisplayPort Y-Cable Docking Station. Connecting to a computer's Mini DisplayPort output and its USB 3.0 port, the docking station provides two Mini DisplayPort outputs, three USB 3.0 ports and one Gigabit Ethernet port.

Supporting DisplayPort 1.2 multi-stream transport (MST) mode, the docking station can independently support two DisplayPort monitors with resolutions up to 2560x1600@60Hz, 24bpp for each monitor. In addition, a single monitor can be supported up to 3840x2160 @60Hz, 24bpp. Both Mini DisplayPort 1.2 outputs are DP++ enabled, allowing the use of either active or passive adapters when adapting a Mini DisplayPort output to support an HDMI, DVI or VGA monitor. The Y-Cable Docking Station also features the HDCP 1.3 content protection scheme with embedded keys, providing uninterrupted transmission of protected audio and video content.

The UltraAV Mini DisplayPort Y-Cable Docking Station features the following:

- Provides two Mini DisplayPort 1.2 output ports
- Expands a USB 3.0 port to three USB 3.0 ports
- Includes one Gigabit Ethernet RJ45 port
- Supports DisplayPort 1.2 Multi-Stream Transport (MST)
- DisplayPort 1.2 maximum link rate: 5.4Gbps (HBR2) per lane
- DP++ (dual-mode) enabled Mini DisplayPort outputs
- Ethernet supports Wake-on-LAN technology, crossover detection, and auto-correction
- Supports USB 3.0 Charging Downstream Port (CDP)
- Compliance: DisplayPort 1.2, 1.1a, VESA DDM, HDCP 1.3, DisplayID and EDID 1.4
- AC adapter with US, EU, AUS and UK power plugs

With an MSRP of $149.99, Accell's new Y-Cable Docking Station is available for purchase now. For more information about Accell and the company's products, please visit <http://www.accellcables.com>.
