Garmin Zumo XT £349.99

'Fast and rugged but not perfect'

Tested by Emma Franklin for six months, 3000 miles

The newest Garmin in the range, the XT is a rugged motorcycle satnav designed for road and off-road use. It has a huge 5.5in glove-friendly touchscreen with excellent clarity and has 32Gb of memory. It can connect to your smartphone and intercom, plus it can be mounted in portrait or landscape. It's quick when it comes to route calculation and start-up, and comes with free updated European maps for life, including topographic maps for off-roading. The TripAdvisor integration is a nice, handy touch when scoping out potential lunch and overnight stops on your travels, although there is a question mark over the accuracy of some of Garmin's preloaded destinations. For example, near where I live it lists two filling stations that simply don't exist (and never have!), so that for that reason I wouldn't rely on it to find you a garage forecourt.

PROS & CONS

- + Easy to use, fast and you can work it with gloves on
- Don't rely on all fuel stations actually being where it says
