OUR STORIES

Hi, I'm Jason King. I come from Baryulgil in northern NSW - Bundjalung country. I'm an artist. I tell stories through my art.

This is the Little Knowledge Warrior.
I painted this painting for my grandson. It has some important messages.

This little warrior will learn many things in life, just like my grandson. This knowledge will make him strong and wise.

I often paint animals in my paintings. Can you see one? Many Aboriginal people have an animal as their totem.

The Little Knowledge Warrior

First Nations people have shared their knowledge through stories and art for thousands of years which has helped keep their culture alive today. This important role is now the responsibility of today's people. Continuing to share these important cultural stories will ensure they are kept alive for our future generations to enjoy. The Little Knowledge Warrior is ready for this challenge! Are you?

Author's Bio:

Jason is a proud Bundjalung man from Baryulgil in northern NSW. He spent his childhood learning his traditional culture from his parents, aunts, uncles and the Bundjalung community. Jason loves to design unique artwork that reflects the beauty of his local area. By telling his community stories through art, Jason is keeping his heritage and culture alive for all future generations.
