

Hot Welcome to Zollamt

WIFI password: ilovezollamt

You are in the landmarked property of the former ducal main tax office in the vernacular now called the „Zollamt“. The completion of the building took place in 1906. The ground floor housed the offices of the main tax office and the vault room, while the other floors were used as dwellings for the servants.

In 1945 the building was first seized by the Americans, and later on by the French. In May 1950, the Customs Office was back to its ancestral origin and until 2008 was used as an office building. Today after extensive remediation, the former customs office is used as Gastronomy in the heart of the Rhine River and the Hindenburghanlage keeping to its roots the 500+ years „old crane“.

For the State Garden Show in 2008, the Rhine river valley has been completely redesigned and given a new shine. Our spacious terrace at Bingen's Cultural riverside offers an unobstructed view of the Niederwald Monument, the Mouse Tower, Castle Ehrenfels and Rüdesheim. On June 27th 2002 this unique cultural landscape was included in the list of world cultural heritage by UNESCO.

The highlight of our kitchen is the specially developed steak preparation and imported BBQ oven made by „Southbend“ from the USA. The grill heats up to about 800 degrees Celsius where the meat is „shock heated“ through the high temperature and open fire. This unique grilling technique creates an incredibly tasty dark crust, under which the meat remains very tender and juicy. To guarantee the highest standards we offer original Japanese Kobe Beef and serve the highest quality steaks from Japan, Australia, USA, Irland and Argentinia.

We hope you enjoy the silhouette of land, nature and history with us and wish you a pleasurable time in the old customs office in Bingen am Rhein. The team of the Zollamt restaurant is pleased to have you as our guests today.

FOOD

Irish Dry Aged Beef

Here you will experience the world renowned flavour and exquisite tenderness of the naturally grown Irish cattle. The meat of the grass fed cattle is slightly mottled with a very fine mineral taste. The beef is finished in special, strictly monitored dry aging rooms for several weeks directly on the bone. Only the perfect interaction of temperature, humidity and air circulation will allow the meat to become incredibly tender and reach its intense flavour.

Australian Wagyu Beef

Wagyu (Wa = Japanese und Gyu = cattle) in the natural style of Kobe, is bred north of Sydney in the Blue Mountain range. A minimum of 450 days of special grain mast lets the meat become the best in the world. In the gourmet industry star chefs regard the Wagyu beef as a luxury, which is seen rarely throughout Europe. The uniqueness of the Wagyu meat is its intense marbling of fat. It provides the excellent taste, juiciness and extreme tenderness. In addition to these features gourmet Wagyu also has a high proportion of oleaginous unsaturated fat as well as a higher perfect age of the health beneficial omega-3 and omega-6 acids.

Original Japanese Kobe Beef

The Kobe-beef from the Japanese region Kobe is the most valuable and exclusive Beef worldwide. The method used in growing the cattle is unique, since the animals move on their field for eight to ten months in small herds while exclusively eating fresh pasture grass. Subsequently the cattle are fed a special food mix from rice straw, soybeans, brewer's grains silage, corn, barley, wheat bran and pure spring water during the 20 months of living in open studs.

A myth is saying that the animal is being washed daily while listening to the classic sounds of Mozart followed by a massage and rubbed with sake. In order to stimulate their appetite, a ration of two litres of beer is being given per day. Through this intensive treatment a very thin layer of fat is being formed and the meat is traversed evenly with an extremely fine and uniform marbling. The Kobe-beef also contains the lowest amount of saturated fatty acids of all cattle breeds. The results are found in its unique taste: the fine marbled steak is remarkably tender and very aromatic.
