No. 1

Spider Plant | Chlorophytum comosum

Spider plants are at the top of the list for fuss-free houseplants. I've practically ignored mine for the past few years and it still develops an abundance of new pups each year. Give them indirect light, feed in the growing months and water every second week or so and you'll be all set.

No. 2

Peace Lily | Spathiphyllum

Peace Lilies are able to tough it out in low light situations. They've even been known to survive off only fluorescent overhead lights, although they are their best in indirect light.

No. 3

Pothos | Epipremnum aureum

Epipremnum aureum or well known as 'Pothos' do well in most spectrums of light, however they thrive in indirect light. Like a Cast Iron plant or Aspidistra elatior, they're prone to scorching. Let the medium dry out between watering.

Snake Plant | Dracaena trifasciata

Snake plants, commonly known as Mother-in-Law's Tongue, Sansevieria and Dracaena trifasciata are one of the easiest houseplants to take care of. Ideal for beginner gardeners or forgetful green thumbs, this plant is highly recommended for improving air quality.
