Les Déglingos (The Wackos) was founded in early 2007 by Laurent Manceron in France. The idea was to bring very innovative and funky designs to the market, steering away from the common pastel plush toys. He was the first designer to design plushes using corduroy and the material's success in the plush toy market has been imitated widely since. The product line has expanded now to include learning toys, backpacks, accessories, and more.

Many celebrities have gone crazy for Les Déglingos (Angelina Jolie, Whoopi Goldberg, Vanessa Paradis) and Les Déglingos have become favorites on many movie sets and the TV series, Modern Family.

The Déglingos are machine-washable in cold/warm water (<100°F/40°C) and have no parts that present a choking hazard. Each product is tested to comply with European regulations (EN71), USA regulations (ASTM), and REACH (AZO for colorants in the fabrics).

Fresh from the foggy bogs of The Boglands, the wildly popular Boglins hybrid action figure toy line was created originally by Tim Clarke and Maureen Trotto in 1987. Clarke is an accomplished puppeteer who worked with Jim Henson on The Dark Crystal, Fraggle Rock, and The Muppets Show, so it is no surprise that Boglins look and feel like high-quality theatrical film characters! Additionally, toy inventor and co-creator Maureen Trotto was recently honored by Women in Toys for her 30+ years of toy design.

These rubbery, monster hand-motioned-manipulative toy figures have the original movable glow-in-the-dark eyes and will be sold in “caged” packaging after the original design. Boglins will surely inspire and capture the imagination of both collectors and social-media-engaged kids of today.
