

SOFA

The Humphreys sofa draws inspiration from the organic minimalism of Donald Judd's daybed. The shape is left open on the right side, designed to be intentionally long for two people to lay comfortably. It follows the same ethos as the Taylor bed, constructed with large slabs of natural wood to expose grain, integrity, and traditional joinery techniques.

Open side is intentionally cantilevered to create open shelf detail where cushion ends.

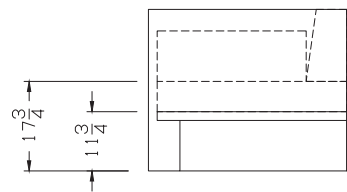

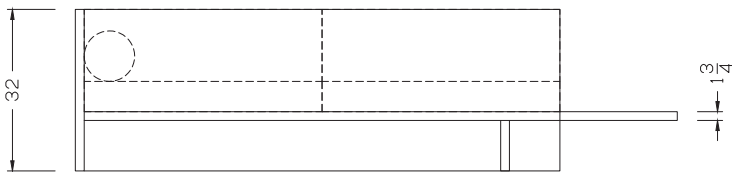

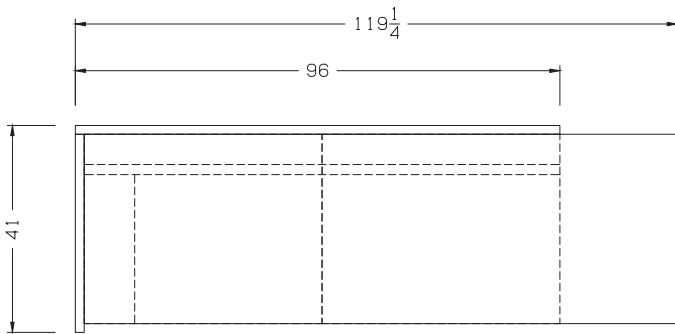

The cushion is designed with water-resistant 10.10oz natural canvas, designed for balance against the wood grain.

This piece is designed with minimal mechanical fasteners and held together by mortise and tenon.
