Cleaning and Caring for your NATURALLY SHEEPSKINS product

Sheepskins are easy to maintain as they are naturally stain and dirt resistant and therefore do not require regular cleaning.

We recommend that you frequently shake and air your sheepskin and brush it with a soft brush to restore its full and fluffy appearance and lustre.

On receipt of your product, you may notice a distinctive lanolin fragrance which is due to the natural oils in the sheepskin. This odour can be intensified after being confined for extended periods in packaging. Airing the product after unpacking should reduce any residual odours.

If your sheepskin is lightly soiled after use it can be spot cleaned with a damp cloth.

For heavier soiling, you can either hand wash or machine wash your product at no more than 30 degrees Celsius on a gentle wool cycle. We recommend using a sheepskin detergent so that the leather doesn't harden.

Your sheepskin should be dried out of direct sunlight in an airy place. It can also be dried on a low heat setting in the tumble drier but please do not dry your product on a radiator or heater.

Lightly brush and stretch your sheepskin after drying.

Please note that as this is a natural product, some discolouration can occur during the washing process. The same applies if the product is left in direct sunlight for prolonged periods of time.

We at NATURALLY SHEEPSKINS are proud of our products and hope that they bring you much pleasure.

IMPORTANT SAFETY NOTICE

Our lambskin baby products have been shorn to a shorter wool length and tanned using a special process that has been tested and deemed suitable for use with young children. Our baby range includes lambskin pram liners, lambskin lined footmuffs and lambskin baby rugs. If any of our products are to be used as bedding for infants under the age of one year, we recommend covering the lambskin with a sheet. As per international standards for safe sleep, it is also recommended that the baby be placed on its back whilst sleeping.
