(1952) £10 CONSECUTIVE TRIO

King George VI died in 1952, the same year that these Coombs/Wilson Ten Pound banknotes were printed by the Commonwealth Bank of Australia.

As this was a one-year issue, these notes were printed in very small numbers. Ten quid was a lot of money during this era, approximately a fortnights wage.

We have available a consecutive run of three in extremely fine to near uncirculated condition.

THE EMU IN THE SKY

The majesty and wonder of the Emu in Sky constellation is captured in the art of Wiradjuri artist Scott Towney on this stunning uncirculated coin. The constellation is a silhouette traced by the dark spaces in the Milky Way, stretching from the Southern Cross to Sagittarius.

Across the country there are different stories about the emu constellation. In the Northern Territory one tale tells of a blind man banishing the spirit of the emu to the sky after his wife died trying to collect eggs. In the Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park near Sydney there is an Aboriginal engraving that appears to match the Emu in the Sky constellation.

1995 1oz PALLADIUM EMU

From the Greek name 'Pallas', goddess of wisdom, Palladium was discovered by the British chemist William Hyde Wollaston in 1804. It took nearly two centuries for palladium's significance to be recognized, and the fight against global pollution owes a lot to this unique metal.

Just six different types of palladium coins have been struck for Australia. The issue limit of 2,500 individual 1995 one ounce Emu with Eggs $40 proof palladium coins was fully subscribed. The coin is housed encapsulated, in a black, lacquered presentation case and accompanied by a numbered certificate of authenticity.
