

Consider these points before making your decision

01

Cost vs. style

While the new mobile has a feel-good factor, its newness slowly fades away within the space of a few months. Consider the huge savings you can benefit from by purchasing a refurbished mobile, instead of a new phone.

New vs. used

The happiness that a new product brings is undeniable. On the other hand, people are a little wary of buying a used gadget due to a fear of the lack of peak performance. Consider buying a refurbished one instead of an old or used phone. Refurbished phones are tested and come with a warranty that assures you of their performance.

03

Untested vs. tested

A new model lacks user feedback. You may find that a newer model or upgrade's new features may not be worth the huge expenditure. The previous or earlier model of the phone is always tested and has an impartial reviewer's response that can help you make an informed decision.

Latest vs. earlier

The obsession with buying the latest model of a gadget, mobile or car is one of the key selling points for major brands. But it is worth considering the benefits of buying a refurbished or as good as new mobile. Not only do you get a mobile that is tested for optimum performance, but it also has nearly all the features as the latest mobile model.
