

OUR CURATORS

What is our Curator Program?

Throughout the years, I Thought of You has build a network of women passionate about the Fair Trade cause and eco-friendly fashion movement, and has allowed them to earn a flexible income while creating positive change. We call our partners Curators.

This is not a multi-level-marketing program, but more of a robust affiliate or wholesale program to allow our partners to earn a generous commission on each product sold. Each member of our team receives a free website where orders can be placed and shipped directly to the customer. Curators are never required to carry inventory, but we have a program to allow them to purchase inventory at a great discount if they choose to do so. This can be a great option for those wanting to setup at farmers markets, craft fairs, and other selling events where customers would prefer to have their purchase ready more immediately.

“ This is not a multi-level-marketing program ... it allows our partners to earn a generous commission on each product sold. ”

Our Curators help tell the story of our brand, our products, and how each product directly affects the person who made it. We welcome partners from all backgrounds and all walks of life, and have a supportive network and online trainings available to provide guidance to ensure they're on the right track to meet their personal goals. Curators are free to work as many or as few hours as fits their schedule.

This program is operated on an application bases and spots are limited to ensure a market is never saturated. No matter who you are or where you come from, if our mission speaks to you, we want to support you and want to be your cheerleaders. We feel so lucky to be surrounded by women who uplift each other, who celebrate each other, and want to see us all achieve success.
